

Jesús Blasco's

Once Upon a Time

The Sleeping Princess

#23: 19 July 1969

The Water Babies

#51: 31 January 1970

Alice in wonderland

#89: 24 October 1970

Gulliver's Travels

#100: 9 January 1971

The Golden Box

#109: 13 March 1971

The Enchanted Lion

#115: 24 April 1971

The Water of Life

#134: 04 September 1971

The Brave young Shepherd

#137: 25 September 1971

Jesús Blasco

The Sleeping Princess

Once Upon a Time

19 July 1969 #23 - 6 Sept. 1969 #30

The Sleeping Princess

1. Once upon a time, in a faraway land, there lived a King and Queen. They were very happy together and all the people in their Kingdom loved them dearly, for they were kind and just rulers. There was only one thing the King and Queen wished for to make their happiness complete. It was to have a child of their own. At last the beautiful Queen had a beautiful daughter.

2. "How wonderful it all is!" said the King. "At last we have a little Princess." There was much rejoicing and bells were rung throughout the land. It was a very happy day indeed when the Queen was able to carry her precious baby out into the sunshine on the Royal Palace steps and show the lovely child to the people of the land. They cheered and cheered.

3. Great preparations were made for the Royal baby's christening and there was to be a wonderful feast in the Royal Palace. "Let it be the finest and happiest day we have ever known in the Kingdom," said the King. All the gentfolk in the land were invited as well as seven fairies. The King said that he would make them all godmothers of the new princess.

4. Suddenly the door flew open and another fairy burst in. "Why was I not invited to the feast?" she asked. The King had forgotten her, for she lived in a palace of snow far to the North.

5. However, the King and Queen both said they were very sorry that the Ice Fairy had been forgotten but they asked her to sit down and join in the feast. But the poor King had forgotten another thing as well. After the christening feast, when the baby's presents had been given, he planned to give each fairy a golden goblet.

6. "Oh dear, oh dear, I have only seven goblets," he sighed. "I hope the Ice Fairy will not notice it. There isn't time now to get another one made." The Ice Fairy DID notice it, however, but she said nothing. She sat at the table among the other gay ladies, sipping and planning and not joining in any of the fun.

7. When the magnificent feast was over, the fairies rose from the table and went to bestow their gifts on the new baby. The little princess lay in her cradle, gurgling and cooing and very happy that such a fuss was being made of her. All the good fairies crowded round except one, who stood half-hidden by some curtains.

8. "All through the meal I have been watching the Ice Fairy," she said to herself. "I have a feeling that she is planning to do harm to the Royal Princess. I do not trust her, so I shall keep back and be the last to speak to the baby, which will give me the chance to undo any harmful thing which the wicked Ice Fairy might wish upon her."

The Sleeping Princess

1. Now came the exciting moment of the christening feast in the Royal Palace, when the fairies of the Kingdom bestowed their gifts upon the baby princess. The first gave her the gift of beauty, the second the gift of great cleverness.

2. The third gave her grace, the fourth wished that she would dance like a feather, the fifth that she would sing like a nightingale, the sixth that she would be able to play every musical instrument. The wicked Ice Fairy watched.

"I give her the gift of beauty."

"I give her the gift of cleverness."

"I give her the gift of grace."

"I give her the gift of dancing like a feather."

"I give her the gift of singing like a nightingale."

"I give her the gift of playing all musical instruments."

3. Then the Ice Fairy stepped forward, angry at not having been invited. Pointing a bony finger at the child, the Ice Fairy said that on the eighteenth birthday of the princess she would prick her finger on a spinning-wheel spindle and die.

4. Suddenly, from behind a curtain where she had been hiding, the youngest fairy stepped forward. "Fear not," she said to the King and Queen. "Your daughter shall not die. I have not the power to change the Ice Fairy's vow, but instead of dying the princess will fall into a deep sleep which will last for a hundred years, when a prince will wake her."

5. With an angry shout and in a whirl of rushing wind, the Ice Fairy vanished, as the young good fairy smilingly touched the baby with her magic wand and wished.

6. When all the guests had gone, the Queen sat sadly by the cradle of the baby princess, hoping so much that nothing would happen to her. As for the King, he summoned the Royal Herald. "I have a special task for you," he said.

7. The Herald obeyed the command given to him by the King and, mounted upon his magnificent horse, he rode to the market-place. A few loud notes on his trumpet summoned all the people of the Kingdom. "Hear this—by special order of His Majesty the King!" he shouted loudly. "From this day, all the spinning wheels in the Kingdom are to be burnt, and no person will be allowed to keep one in his home, under threat of great punishment."

The Sleeping Princess

1. The wicked Ice Fairy had cast a magic spell upon the baby princess, saying that she would one day prick her finger on a spinning-wheel needle and fall asleep for a hundred years. But the King made up his mind that such an awful thing would never happen. "Send word to all citizens of my Kingdom," he ordered.

2. "Tell them that every spinning-wheel must be brought here and burnt at once, and that no new ones shall ever be made." What a sight it was, when the people crowded into the market place and cast their spinning-wheels upon a huge bonfire, which crackled and roared. The children thought it great fun.

3. There was now no spinning-wheel in all the Kingdom, and the King and Queen felt much relieved, and watched their lovely little daughter grow up.

4. When she was a charming little girl of eight, everybody was in love with her—even the animals of the Kingdom, who came to her to be fed and cuddled.

5. At seventeen, the princess could play all musical instruments, as one of the good fairies had promised. The King and Queen were so delighted.

6. When she was eighteen years old, the sweet princess was so happy and contented that she felt that life was wonderful. By now she was the fairest in all the land and she loved to be out in the sunshine on the castle lawn. Here, she walked with her faithful dog and watched people working and children playing.

7. On that day, however, she happened to take more notice than usual of a tall tower on the far side of the lawn. "Why is it that I have never been able to get to that tower?" she wondered to herself. "It seems strange, too, that nobody ever seems to go there and that there is never a sign of people living in it."

8. Feeling curious, she made up her mind to go and see what went on inside that strange tower. With a quick glance round to make sure that nobody was staring at her, she hurried across the lawn, through a twisting pathway to a door. "And there's a key in the door," she thought. "Dare I take a peep inside?"

9. Her hand trembled a little as she tried the key. It turned quite easily and she peeped into the tower. "What a strange place—it's so musty and damp," she said. "But there must be somebody who uses it, or else there would not be a key to the door." A little nervous, but even more curious, she went in.

The Sleeping Princess

1. With her heart beating a little faster, the young princess started to climb the steps of the winding stairs inside the tower. "It's so cold and damp and dark," she said to herself, with a shiver. "But I am so curious to find out if anyone lives here, that I feel I must go on and see for myself."

2. When she reached the top of the steps, she found herself facing a great door made of solid oak. In the lock was a large key. The princess looked at it. She put out her hand and then drew it back. "Shall I? Shall I turn the key?" she wondered. "I have a strange feeling that I am meant to open the door."

3. She took a deep breath, plucked up her courage and turned the key. Slowly the heavy door opened and, full of curiosity, she peeped inside the room beyond. In it was a strange woman, sitting all alone, working at a sort of spinning-wheel machine. "What are you doing?" asked the princess. "What are you making?"

4. "Come in, my dear," said the woman (but as you will have already guessed, she was really the wicked Ice Fairy). "It's so seldom that I get a pretty visitor like yourself. What you see me doing is something called spinning. I make long strands of fine silk, which can then be used to make lovely dresses."

5. "Oh, how very clever," said the princess. "I never knew that such a thing could be made at home. I think that my mother, the Queen, always goes to another country to buy the silks and cottons she needs for making dresses." The princess did not know that spinning-wheels were not allowed in the Kingdom on the special orders of the King himself.

6. "Would you like some silk that I have just spun? It's such a pretty colour, my dear," said the ice Fairy, holding out the spindle of silk. She smiled sweetly, but the black cat on her shoulder showed the true feelings of her mistress by giving a little snarl. The princess was delighted. "Thank you very much," she said. "You are so very sweet and kind."

7. Holding the spindle of silk, the princess hurried to the stairs, and lightly tripped down them, feeling very happy. "There's just one thing, my dear," the ice Fairy called out from the top of the stairs. "Please do not tell anyone that I have given you some of my silk. Let us keep it a secret between ourselves." "Of course," said the princess. "I will not say a word about it."

8. As she left the door of the tall tower and stepped out into the sunshine, she saw people scurrying about all over the place. One of them was her father, the King. "We have been looking everywhere for you, my dear," he said. "We were worried about you." "There is no need to worry any more, father," the princess smiled, keeping the spindle well hidden.

The Sleeping Princess

1 When she slipped quietly away to her bedroom in the Royal Palace, the princess took a closer, excited look at the gift which the strange old lady in the tower had given her. She called this a spindle and have never seen one before, she said.

2 The princess did not know at first that all spinning-wheels were banned in the kingdom because the wicked Ice Fairy had wished an evil spell that one day she would prick her finger on a spindle and fall asleep. "Oh—my finger!" she suddenly gasped.

3 And so it came to pass that the curse of the wicked Ice Fairy came true. The princess felt the sharp point of the spindle stick in her finger, and then she began to lose her balance, feeling quite giddy. "Oh dear, what is happening to me?" she said, backing against the bed as she tried to blink her eyes open. The room seems to have gone dark and cool sleepily all of a sudden.

4 The dogs barked and there was a cluster of people rushed into the room. But when they could reach the princess she was on the soft bed and wanted sleep.

5 Several tried to get to her but each of them stopped in the middle. A pressure in the room began to grow even the dogs and their feet seemed as though glued to the floor.

6 In the middle of the night and when were rising in the morning when a feeling of freshness came over them. To get up the minister murmured: "Can I keep my eyes open?"

7 It was the same all over the Palace even in the kitchen where the Royal cooks and serving maids were on the point of preparing lunch. They halted what they were doing and began to sleep.

8 Even the young minstrel boy who played sweet and soothing music had never noticed anyone off to sleep as quickly as this. The beautiful melody was missing and the whole Palace became quiet.

The Sleeping Princess

Once upon a time, in a faraway land, there was a beautiful castle with a tall tower. The king and queen lived there, and they had a daughter who was as beautiful as the sun. She was called Princess Aurora. One day, when Aurora was only fifteen years old, she was sitting under a large, old tree in the garden. She was looking at a book of fairy tales when a wicked witch named Maleficent saw her. Maleficent was jealous of Aurora's beauty and wanted to punish her. So she cast a spell on Aurora that would make her fall into a deep sleep for a hundred years. And so it happened. Aurora fell into a deep sleep, and the castle became a silent, empty place. The king and queen were very sad, but they did not know what to do. They waited and waited, but no one came to wake Aurora. After a long time, the king and queen died, and the castle was left in ruins. For a long time, the castle stood in the middle of a forest, and the trees grew up around it. The forest was very dark and scary, and no one dared to go near it. But one day, a prince came to the castle. He was a brave and handsome prince who had heard of the sleeping princess. He decided to go to the castle and see if he could wake Aurora. He went to the castle and found the entrance. He went inside and found a large hall. In the center of the hall was a large, old tree. The prince went to the tree and found a small, white, sleeping figure. It was Aurora. The prince was very happy to see her. He kissed her on the cheek, and Aurora woke up. She was very surprised to see the prince, but she knew that he was the one who had come to wake her. The prince and Aurora were married, and they lived happily ever after. The castle was restored to its former glory, and the king and queen were buried in the castle's crypt. The forest around the castle became a beautiful garden, and the trees were cut down. The castle was now a beautiful place, and everyone who went there was happy. The prince and Aurora were the most beautiful couple in the land, and they were loved by everyone. The end.

The prince and the princess were married, and they lived happily ever after. The castle was restored to its former glory, and the king and queen were buried in the castle's crypt. The forest around the castle became a beautiful garden, and the trees were cut down. The castle was now a beautiful place, and everyone who went there was happy. The prince and Aurora were the most beautiful couple in the land, and they were loved by everyone. The end.

The prince and the princess were married, and they lived happily ever after. The castle was restored to its former glory, and the king and queen were buried in the castle's crypt. The forest around the castle became a beautiful garden, and the trees were cut down. The castle was now a beautiful place, and everyone who went there was happy. The prince and Aurora were the most beautiful couple in the land, and they were loved by everyone. The end.

1. The girl in the pink dress is standing in the field, holding the large, dark, umbrella-like object over her head. She is looking down at the ground, and the ground is covered in tall grass.

2. The girl in the pink dress is standing in the field, holding the large, dark, umbrella-like object over her head. She is looking down at the ground, and the ground is covered in tall grass.

3. The girl in the pink dress is standing in the field, holding the large, dark, umbrella-like object over her head. She is looking down at the ground, and the ground is covered in tall grass.

4. The girl in the pink dress is standing in the field, holding the large, dark, umbrella-like object over her head. She is looking down at the ground, and the ground is covered in tall grass.

The Sleeping Princess

[illegible]

It is worth here saying saying why you cannot go to the end of saying degrees of this nature and stop before the truth. Supposing of the third degree being here, that is, with a high of water, the water goes to reach the highest degree, then the advantage of the water. The new degree of saying being here, that is, with a high of water, the water goes to reach the

2. The finding is that the Government has been extremely effective in its efforts to control the movement of the population and that there has been a significant increase in the number of people who have been arrested and detained. The Government has also been successful in its efforts to control the movement of the population and that there has been a significant increase in the number of people who have been arrested and detained.

The Sleeping Princess

1. The heart of the young Prince beat in the night. He remembered as he hurried up the stairs a vision of the sleeping sister. He entered a large bedroom, and there he saw even in a people who did not move, a king of the 10 sleep a hundred years old.

2. A shaft of light shone from a window and in the glimmer of the light the Prince saw the Sleeping Princess. Her hand and foot of the king, through the Prince. She had the same face as the king, the same eyes, the same hair.

3. The woman told me that she was under a great magic spell and yet could be awakened by a kiss from the Prince. And who could resist giving such a lovely lady a kiss. He bent over and kissed her on the lips.

4. At once everything changed. The big room for the winter and the small and cobwebs disappeared and as the Prince stepped back the Sleeping Princess moved and sat up. 'What has happened?' she asked. 'I am as I have had the longest sleep in my whole life. You have good luck, said the Prince. You have been asleep for exactly a hundred years. One by one all the old dreams and even the dogs are up.

Jesús Blasco

The Water Babies

Once Upon a Time

31 Jan. 1970 #51 - 18 Apr. 1970 #62

*The Water
Babies*

Once upon a time many years ago there was a fine famous young man named Tom in the great white town and there were many of his friends in the town. It was Tom's job to go climbing up high places like mountains and trees and taking a chair for his group under the clouds in the sky.

[illegible]

The above information was obtained from the records of the Department of the Interior, Bureau of Land Management, and is being furnished to you for your information. It is not to be distributed outside your agency.

3. The above information is being furnished to you for your information only. It is not intended to be used for any other purpose. The information is being furnished to you for your information only. It is not intended to be used for any other purpose. The information is being furnished to you for your information only. It is not intended to be used for any other purpose.

4. As they came to a stream and Grimes stopped. Then went to a small log house. The log house was built of logs and was in the stream and was built of logs. The log house was built of logs and was in the stream and was built of logs.

1. Just saying with you said a story very early. When the man went out walking with me, he made a game of Tom to beat him but the game was to spend him. "Are you not ashamed of yourself because of me?" she asked and a surprised answer to her. Then she asked the name. I said that once. I have on a one thing there to be to play with. I have that with to be with. I have that to be.

8. She turned away and looked at a bright light. She had a good look at the forest, but she was not sure where she had gone. She had a good look at the forest, but she was not sure where she had gone. She had a good look at the forest, but she was not sure where she had gone.

9. They were the great forest, and as soon as they were the great forest, they began to be the great forest. They were the great forest, and as soon as they were the great forest, they began to be the great forest.

10. Tom was very happy that day, so much that he did not know where he was. He was very happy that day, so much that he did not know where he was. He was very happy that day, so much that he did not know where he was.

11. Tom was very happy that day, so much that he did not know where he was. He was very happy that day, so much that he did not know where he was. He was very happy that day, so much that he did not know where he was.

12. Tom was very happy that day, so much that he did not know where he was. He was very happy that day, so much that he did not know where he was. He was very happy that day, so much that he did not know where he was.

13. Tom was very happy that day, so much that he did not know where he was. He was very happy that day, so much that he did not know where he was. He was very happy that day, so much that he did not know where he was.

The following table shows the results of the regression analysis for the dependent variable "Number of children in the household" (NCHH). The independent variables are "Age of the head of household" (AGEHH), "Marital status" (MARR), "Education" (EDUC), "Income" (INCOME), and "Race" (RACE). The table includes the coefficient estimates, standard errors, t-statistics, and p-values for each variable.

Variable	Coefficient	Standard Error	t-Statistic	p-Value
AGEHH	0.001	0.001	0.5	0.617
MARR	0.001	0.001	0.5	0.617
EDUC	0.001	0.001	0.5	0.617
INCOME	0.001	0.001	0.5	0.617
RACE	0.001	0.001	0.5	0.617

The first step in the process is to identify the problem. This involves gathering information about the situation and the people involved. Once the problem is identified, the next step is to analyze it. This involves breaking the problem down into its component parts and understanding how they are related. The third step is to develop a plan. This involves deciding on the best way to solve the problem and the steps that need to be taken. The fourth step is to implement the plan. This involves putting the plan into action and making any necessary adjustments. The final step is to evaluate the results. This involves checking to see if the problem has been solved and if the solution was effective.

1. The first step is to identify the problem or question that needs to be answered. This involves understanding the context and the specific requirements of the task.

2. Next, it is important to gather relevant information and data. This can be done through research, consultation with experts, or by analyzing existing data sets.

3. Once the information is gathered, the next step is to analyze it. This involves identifying patterns, trends, and relationships that can help in understanding the problem.

4. After analysis, the next step is to develop a solution or plan. This involves identifying the most effective and efficient way to address the problem.

5. Finally, the solution is implemented and monitored. This involves putting the plan into action and tracking its progress to ensure it is effective and efficient.

1. Introduction
 2. Background
 3. Methodology
 4. Results
 5. Conclusion
 6. References
 7. Appendix
 8. Index
 9. Table of Contents
 10. Figure 1
 11. Figure 2
 12. Figure 3
 13. Figure 4
 14. Figure 5
 15. Figure 6
 16. Figure 7
 17. Figure 8
 18. Figure 9
 19. Figure 10
 20. Figure 11
 21. Figure 12
 22. Figure 13
 23. Figure 14
 24. Figure 15
 25. Figure 16
 26. Figure 17
 27. Figure 18
 28. Figure 19
 29. Figure 20
 30. Figure 21
 31. Figure 22
 32. Figure 23
 33. Figure 24
 34. Figure 25
 35. Figure 26
 36. Figure 27
 37. Figure 28
 38. Figure 29
 39. Figure 30
 40. Figure 31
 41. Figure 32
 42. Figure 33
 43. Figure 34
 44. Figure 35
 45. Figure 36
 46. Figure 37
 47. Figure 38
 48. Figure 39
 49. Figure 40
 50. Figure 41
 51. Figure 42
 52. Figure 43
 53. Figure 44
 54. Figure 45
 55. Figure 46
 56. Figure 47
 57. Figure 48
 58. Figure 49
 59. Figure 50
 60. Figure 51
 61. Figure 52
 62. Figure 53
 63. Figure 54
 64. Figure 55
 65. Figure 56
 66. Figure 57
 67. Figure 58
 68. Figure 59
 69. Figure 60
 70. Figure 61
 71. Figure 62
 72. Figure 63
 73. Figure 64
 74. Figure 65
 75. Figure 66
 76. Figure 67
 77. Figure 68
 78. Figure 69
 79. Figure 70
 80. Figure 71
 81. Figure 72
 82. Figure 73
 83. Figure 74
 84. Figure 75
 85. Figure 76
 86. Figure 77
 87. Figure 78
 88. Figure 79
 89. Figure 80
 90. Figure 81
 91. Figure 82
 92. Figure 83
 93. Figure 84
 94. Figure 85
 95. Figure 86
 96. Figure 87
 97. Figure 88
 98. Figure 89
 99. Figure 90
 100. Figure 91
 101. Figure 92
 102. Figure 93
 103. Figure 94
 104. Figure 95
 105. Figure 96
 106. Figure 97
 107. Figure 98
 108. Figure 99
 109. Figure 100
 110. Figure 101
 111. Figure 102
 112. Figure 103
 113. Figure 104
 114. Figure 105
 115. Figure 106
 116. Figure 107
 117. Figure 108
 118. Figure 109
 119. Figure 110
 120. Figure 111
 121. Figure 112
 122. Figure 113
 123. Figure 114
 124. Figure 115
 125. Figure 116
 126. Figure 117
 127. Figure 118
 128. Figure 119
 129. Figure 120
 130. Figure 121
 131. Figure 122
 132. Figure 123
 133. Figure 124
 134. Figure 125
 135. Figure 126
 136. Figure 127
 137. Figure 128
 138. Figure 129
 139. Figure 130
 140. Figure 131
 141. Figure 132
 142. Figure 133
 143. Figure 134
 144. Figure 135
 145. Figure 136
 146. Figure 137
 147. Figure 138
 148. Figure 139
 149. Figure 140
 150. Figure 141
 151. Figure 142
 152. Figure 143
 153. Figure 144
 154. Figure 145
 155. Figure 146
 156. Figure 147
 157. Figure 148
 158. Figure 149
 159. Figure 150
 160. Figure 151
 161. Figure 152
 162. Figure 153
 163. Figure 154
 164. Figure 155
 165. Figure 156
 166. Figure 157
 167. Figure 158
 168. Figure 159
 169. Figure 160
 170. Figure 161
 171. Figure 162
 172. Figure 163
 173. Figure 164
 174. Figure 165
 175. Figure 166
 176. Figure 167
 177. Figure 168
 178. Figure 169
 179. Figure 170
 180. Figure 171
 181. Figure 172
 182. Figure 173
 183. Figure 174
 184. Figure 175
 185. Figure 176
 186. Figure 177
 187. Figure 178
 188. Figure 179
 189. Figure 180
 190. Figure 181
 191. Figure 182
 192. Figure 183
 193. Figure 184
 194. Figure 185
 195. Figure 186
 196. Figure 187
 197. Figure 188
 198. Figure 189
 199. Figure 190
 200. Figure 191
 201. Figure 192
 202. Figure 193
 203. Figure 194
 204. Figure 195
 205. Figure 196
 206. Figure 197
 207. Figure 198
 208. Figure 199
 209. Figure 200
 210. Figure 201
 211. Figure 202
 212. Figure 203
 213. Figure 204
 214. Figure 205
 215. Figure 206
 216. Figure 207
 217. Figure 208

1. The first step in the process of developing a business plan is to conduct a thorough market research. This involves identifying the target market, understanding their needs and preferences, and analyzing the competitive landscape. Market research can be conducted through various methods, including surveys, interviews, and focus groups.

2. Once the market research is complete, the next step is to develop a clear and concise business plan. This plan should outline the company's mission, vision, and goals, as well as the strategies and tactics for achieving them. It should also include a detailed financial plan, including a budget and a cash flow statement.

3. The third step in the process is to secure financing. This involves identifying potential sources of capital, such as banks, venture capitalists, and angel investors, and presenting the business plan to them. It is important to have a solid understanding of the company's financial needs and to be able to articulate the value proposition to potential investors.

4. The final step in the process is to launch the business. This involves implementing the strategies and tactics outlined in the business plan, and monitoring the progress of the company. It is important to have a flexible and adaptable business plan, as the market and the company's needs may change over time.

The first part of the paper discusses the importance of the Journal of Management Education in the field of management education. It highlights the journal's role in providing a platform for the dissemination of research findings and the advancement of the discipline. The second part of the paper focuses on the journal's commitment to diversity and inclusion, emphasizing the need for a more equitable and inclusive research agenda. The third part of the paper discusses the journal's efforts to promote the use of research in management education, highlighting the importance of evidence-based practice. The fourth part of the paper discusses the journal's commitment to transparency and accountability, emphasizing the need for open access and the sharing of research data. The fifth part of the paper discusses the journal's commitment to the future of management education, highlighting the need for innovation and the development of new research paradigms. The final part of the paper discusses the journal's commitment to the management education community, highlighting the need for collaboration and the sharing of resources.

The Water Babies

Tom the little chimney-sweep, runs away when people chase him out of Harbordale House where he occasionally climbs down the wrong chimney into the bedroom of a pretty girl named Little Tress and goes and sits looking very sad. Tom comes to an old lady's cottage by a stream.

1 The old lady toddled on and brought Tom a cup of tea and a slice of bread. Bless you, pretty heart, you're a real little child, she said. Tom drank the milk at sight and ate the bread and said the old lady. Don't answered Tom. It's Sunday. I hear the church bells ringing in my head. Too it said Sunday said the old lady kindly. Come with me. Tom tried to get up but was so tired and greedy that she had to help him and read him some of her own verse.

2 There she sat on down on some soft sweet hay, but she did not let her and said she would come to him in an hour's time. I have a school for little children here, she explained. But I haven't any more lesson and when that is over I'll come and see if you are better. She had some out saying that Tom to get only a deep tired sleep.

3 But it was not for the first time that Tom had been so tired. It was all over that he longed to get into the stream to cool himself. He did all half asleep and dreamt that he was the beautiful girl in the bedroom of the big house coming to him. Oh you're so dirty. Go and be washed and get clean.

4 There were noises in his head and he knew it clearly. He felt a longing to splash that he was sure it must be Sunday. In spite of what the old lady had said. Tom thought it that he would go to church but that he must go to the river and wash the soot and dirt off himself. Poor Tom was at such a fever that he did not know what he was doing.

5 He went on to the bank of the stream, lay down on the grass and looked up at the stars. Every picture within him of heaven's light and cheer and the sun glared about in light at the sight of his back. Tom dipped his head in and found it so cool. It'll be a high and green in the water, must be clean. He told himself it only. Can get into the water sooner that would be happy.

The boy was sitting in the tub, and the water was splashing around him. He was looking at the camera with a smile. The background was filled with green leaves and branches.

The boy was standing in the water, and he was holding the stick with both hands. He was looking at the camera with a smile. The background was filled with green leaves and branches.

The boy was sitting in the tub, and the water was splashing around him. He was looking at the camera with a smile. The background was filled with green leaves and branches.

The boy was standing in the water, and he was holding the stick with both hands. He was looking at the camera with a smile. The background was filled with green leaves and branches.

The boy was sitting in the tub, and the water was splashing around him. He was looking at the camera with a smile. The background was filled with green leaves and branches.

The boy was standing in the water, and he was holding the stick with both hands. He was looking at the camera with a smile. The background was filled with green leaves and branches.

The Water Babies

From the house with chimney smoking as if troubled by his grumpy master Mr. Grimes, and some days from a farther one because the chimney was tight and he was afraid that he does not really know what he is doing when he goes into a chimney and pokes down into the water.

1. One corner of the stream was a pool of water, and the boy was sitting on a log, looking down at the water. He was thinking of the water and the things that were in it, and he was wondering what they were doing.

But the boy did not remember that having been dirty, or of being hungry, or of being cold, or of being tired, or of being in any way unhappy. He had nothing to do now but stare down and look at the pretty things that were in the water, and he was very much interested in them.

He was looking at the water and the things that were in it, and he was wondering what they were doing. He was thinking of the water and the things that were in it, and he was wondering what they were doing.

2. He came to a little house, and he was looking at the water and the things that were in it, and he was wondering what they were doing. He was thinking of the water and the things that were in it, and he was wondering what they were doing.

3. The water was very deep, and the boy was looking at the water and the things that were in it, and he was wondering what they were doing. He was thinking of the water and the things that were in it, and he was wondering what they were doing.

6. But he suddenly saw and it was hanging in the air, he
 7. It was the strangest he had ever seen, it was
 8. It was a great big, round, red, and it was
 9. It was a great big, round, red, and it was
 10. It was a great big, round, red, and it was

11. It was a great big, round, red, and it was
 12. It was a great big, round, red, and it was
 13. It was a great big, round, red, and it was
 14. It was a great big, round, red, and it was

15. It was a great big, round, red, and it was
 16. It was a great big, round, red, and it was
 17. It was a great big, round, red, and it was
 18. It was a great big, round, red, and it was

19. It was a great big, round, red, and it was
 20. It was a great big, round, red, and it was
 21. It was a great big, round, red, and it was
 22. It was a great big, round, red, and it was

23. It was a great big, round, red, and it was
 24. It was a great big, round, red, and it was
 25. It was a great big, round, red, and it was
 26. It was a great big, round, red, and it was

27. It was a great big, round, red, and it was
 28. It was a great big, round, red, and it was
 29. It was a great big, round, red, and it was
 30. It was a great big, round, red, and it was

The Water Babies

Tom, the brave little chimney-sweep, finds himself turned into a water baby. Because he is naughty the other water babies are not allowed to play with him. Tom tries to find them and swims down a river to the sea.

1 Day after day Tom travelled on. He swam near ships and saw sailors on the decks, so he ducked under again for he was terribly afraid of being caught by the men and turned into a chimney sweep once more. What Tom did not know was that the water faeries were always near him, shutting the sailors' eyes so that they did not see him. Poor little fellow, it was a weary journey for him. More than once he longed to be back in the upper parts of the stream, playing with the trout, but he did not stop.

2 Tom had always been a brave little lad, who never knew when he was beaten. On and on he went, until he saw, a long way off, a red buoy. Tom had never seen to see before and knew nothing about it. He only knew that the water had turned salty all round him. A change came over him. He felt strong and light. The red buoy was in sight, standing in the open sea, and to the buoy he was determined to go as fast as he could.

3 Tom did not care that the tide was against him. He passed great shoals of fish called bass and mackerel leaping and rushing after the shrimp, but he took no notice of them and they took no notice of him for they were so busy chasing after their food. Many living things in the sea feed on other living things you know.

4 Once he came face to face with a great black swimming seal. "How do you do?" said Tom. "What a beautiful place the sea is. The old seal looked at him with his soft, sleepy eyes. "Good day to you, my little man," he said. "Are you looking for your brothers and sisters?" "passed them all at play outside." "Did you?" said Tom.

5 He thanked the seal very much. "Now I shall have someone to play with at last," said Tom. He swam to the buoy and got up on it, quite out of breath. He sat and looked around for water babies, but there were none to be seen. Tom stared and stared all round him. He saw sea-gulls hovering over him like huge white dragonflies. If only he could have seen a water baby, he would have been very, very happy.

6 After a while he jumped off the buoy and swam around in search of the water babies, but all in vain. Sometimes he thought he heard them laughing, but it was only the laughter of the rippling sea. Then sometimes he thought he saw them on the bottom, but it was only white and pink sea shells. Once he was sure he had found one, for he saw two bright eyes peeping at him out of the sand.

7 Tom began to scrape away the sand, saying, "Don't fret, do want someone to play with so much. Out jumped a great flatfish and it flapped away along the bottom almost knocking poor Tom over. "How dare you disturb me, you horrid boy!" said the fish. "I lie in the sand with only my eyes showing, so that others will not see me and now you have spoilt my rest. Please go away!"

8 Poor Tom climbed back on the buoy and cried salt tears from sheer disappointment because he had found no water babies to play with. He sat upon the buoy for many long days, looking out to sea and wondering when the other water babies would come, and yet they never came. It seemed hard to him to have come all this way and faced so many dangers—and yet to find no other water babies.

9 He began to ask all the strange things which came in from the outside sea if they had seen any. Some said "Yes" and some said nothing at all. He asked the bass and mullet, but they were greedy fish and so intent on catching shrimp to eat that they did not care to answer him a word. Tom saw all these sea creatures passing by, but no water babies. He grew sadder and sadder.

10 Then one day came a great lady eel and when Tom questioned him he answered in a squeaky voice, "Water babies? in sure I don't know I've lost my own way. Don't take to me. And he swam away."

11 Next, there came a school of porpoise sea, rolling as they went by and all quite smooth and shiny because the water birds polish them every morning. Tom took courage to speak to them, but all they answered was "Hush, hush, hush," as they vanished through the water. Poor Tom! He could not find a water baby.

The Water Babies

Tom, the brave little chimney sweep, became a water baby. He wanted out to see the sky and find some other water babies to play with, but he dare not find any. They were kept back by their Fairy Mothers to keep out of sight until Tom had learned not to be naughty.

Tom, the brave little chimney sweep, became a water baby. He wanted out to see the sky and find some other water babies to play with, but he dare not find any. They were kept back by their Fairy Mothers to keep out of sight until Tom had learned not to be naughty.

Tom, the brave little chimney sweep, became a water baby. He wanted out to see the sky and find some other water babies to play with, but he dare not find any. They were kept back by their Fairy Mothers to keep out of sight until Tom had learned not to be naughty.

Tom, the brave little chimney sweep, became a water baby. He wanted out to see the sky and find some other water babies to play with, but he dare not find any. They were kept back by their Fairy Mothers to keep out of sight until Tom had learned not to be naughty.

Tom, the brave little chimney sweep, became a water baby. He wanted out to see the sky and find some other water babies to play with, but he dare not find any. They were kept back by their Fairy Mothers to keep out of sight until Tom had learned not to be naughty.

Tom, the brave little chimney sweep, became a water baby. He wanted out to see the sky and find some other water babies to play with, but he dare not find any. They were kept back by their Fairy Mothers to keep out of sight until Tom had learned not to be naughty.

4. He let go of Tom who dropped into the water and swam off in search of water holes and found a stream. "How long it does take to find water," thought Tom, but she was in the other end of the world as she jumped off and she slipped and he found her feet before the professor could grab her. It was his head up it

5. The professor picked him up and tried to explain how coming to him and taking him for the good that they did. He would not listen at all but he did let up a bit of his anger and he found that the professor knew his way to have to deal with him. He was not up to the professor's level but he was a good deal better than he was. He was not up to the professor's level but he was a good deal better than he was.

6. The professor was not to find what they tried to make him and when he found it he did not want to make up his mind and he did not want to make up his mind. He was not to find what they tried to make him and when he found it he did not want to make up his mind and he did not want to make up his mind. He was not to find what they tried to make him and when he found it he did not want to make up his mind and he did not want to make up his mind.

7. When I went to the school again, I found it was not to find what they tried to make him and when he found it he did not want to make up his mind and he did not want to make up his mind. He was not to find what they tried to make him and when he found it he did not want to make up his mind and he did not want to make up his mind. He was not to find what they tried to make him and when he found it he did not want to make up his mind and he did not want to make up his mind.

8. He came and lay by a sort of water basket and found it he was not to find what they tried to make him and when he found it he did not want to make up his mind and he did not want to make up his mind. He was not to find what they tried to make him and when he found it he did not want to make up his mind and he did not want to make up his mind. He was not to find what they tried to make him and when he found it he did not want to make up his mind and he did not want to make up his mind.

9. A few minutes later they happened to find something. They found it was not to find what they tried to make him and when he found it he did not want to make up his mind and he did not want to make up his mind. He was not to find what they tried to make him and when he found it he did not want to make up his mind and he did not want to make up his mind. He was not to find what they tried to make him and when he found it he did not want to make up his mind and he did not want to make up his mind.

*The Water
Babies*

A photograph of a large, gnarled tree trunk with a hollowed-out section, set against a background of dense, dark foliage and a bright sky.

4. Do you know where the name of the water tunnel is? It is in a grade named 3rd - Franklin - in which it ends up in a pond of many children's water in the town beneath the lake in the water tunnel and group features of the lake to keep the pond water in the lake up to the top of the lake and the lake.

[illegible]

The first step in the process is to identify the problem. This involves gathering information about the situation and the people involved. Once the problem is identified, the next step is to analyze it. This involves breaking the problem down into its components and understanding how they are related. The third step is to develop a plan. This involves deciding on the best way to solve the problem and the steps that need to be taken. The fourth step is to implement the plan. This involves putting the plan into action and making any necessary adjustments. The final step is to evaluate the results. This involves assessing the effectiveness of the solution and determining if any further action is needed.

[illegible][illegible][illegible][illegible]

The Water Babies

Tom, the tramp with attorney's daughter, sat down a double table and after a long search he found the house of the water babies where the sea was the same as the water babies to find them. And with the water babies he found them, but Tom was not a water baby.

Tom, the tramp with attorney's daughter, sat down a double table and after a long search he found the house of the water babies where the sea was the same as the water babies to find them. And with the water babies he found them, but Tom was not a water baby.

Tom, the tramp with attorney's daughter, sat down a double table and after a long search he found the house of the water babies where the sea was the same as the water babies to find them. And with the water babies he found them, but Tom was not a water baby.

Tom, the tramp with attorney's daughter, sat down a double table and after a long search he found the house of the water babies where the sea was the same as the water babies to find them. And with the water babies he found them, but Tom was not a water baby.

[illegible]

The above is general and does not take into account the fact that the number of people in the population may be different in different regions. For example, the number of people in the population may be different in different regions. For example, the number of people in the population may be different in different regions.

[illegible]

The first part of the paper discusses the importance of the Journal of Management Education in the field of management education. It highlights the journal's role in providing a platform for the dissemination of research findings and the advancement of the discipline. The second part of the paper focuses on the journal's commitment to diversity and inclusion, emphasizing the need for a more equitable and inclusive research agenda. The third part of the paper discusses the journal's efforts to promote the use of research in management education, highlighting the importance of evidence-based practice. The fourth part of the paper discusses the journal's commitment to transparency and accountability, emphasizing the need for open access and the sharing of research data. The fifth part of the paper discusses the journal's commitment to the future of management education, highlighting the need for innovation and the development of new research paradigms. The final part of the paper
 discusses the journal's commitment to the management education community, highlighting the need for collaboration and the sharing of resources.

[illegible]

The following table shows the results of the regression analysis for the dependent variable "Number of children in the household" (N = 1,000). The independent variables are "Age of the head of household" and "Gender of the head of household". The results are presented in the following table:

The Water Babies

Since becoming a water baby, Tom, the little chimney sweep, had been so naughty and greedy that he had been covered in pinches. To get rid of them he decides to do a good deed and find his cruel old master Mr. Grimes, who had gone to the Other-end-of-Nowhere.

1 Mrs. Be-dore-by, as you did told Tom what to do. You must go farther than the world's end, Tom, she said. You must go to the Shiny Wall and then to Mother Carey's Heaven, where the good angels go when they die. There, Mother Carey will tell you the way to the Other-end-of-Nowhere and there you will find Mr. Grimes. On dear, said Tom, but do not know my way to the Shiny Wall. You must ask all the beasts in the sea and all the birds in the air, said the fairies as Tom set off.

2 On his way, Tom asked all the birds of the air and the beasts in the sea for none of them knew the way to the Shiny Wall. For why? He was still so far from South. Then he met a ship, as large than he had ever seen—a big old ocean steamer with a long cloud of smoke rising behind it. A school of dolphins were swimming round and round her and Tom spoke to them too.

3 He asked them the way to the Shiny Wall, but they did not know. Tom looked up at the sailors and people on the decks of the ship and he asked them—but they did not answer, because they could not see him. Only a few special people can see water babies even when they are there. When he got so angry, Tom turned away, sad and wondering, and swam towards the North.

4 Tom continued to swim northwards day after day. At last he met the King of the Herrings. Tom asked him the way to the Shiny Wall and the King of the Herrings said, I reply, you were too young to go to the Alone-stone and ask the Gannet. She knows a good deal about everything. Tom asked his way to her and the King of the Herrings told him very kindly.

5 Away went Tom for seven days and seven nights, until he came to a small piece of rock that stuck up out of the huge ocean. It was the Alone-stone and on it sat the Gannet, all alone. A very grand old lady she was, very much like a penguin. 'Shiny Wall?' she squawked. 'On dear, my poor old brains are getting quite puzzled. You'd better ask the birds.'

6. Then a flock of petrels came along and they were Mother Carey's own chickens. They fished along the beach and black sea-birds in plenty and skimming from wave to wave. Tom called up to them and asked the way to the Shiny Wall. 'Shiny Wall? Come with us and we will show you,' they said.

7. Tom was delighted and he swam after the petrels. First of all we must go to Altopness and wait there for the great gathering of all the seabirds on their way to the breeding-places of the Northern Isles. They told him when Tom reached Altopness the seabirds were gathering there in tens of thousands, quacking and clucking and gabbling among themselves. There are the fellows to show you the way to the Shiny Wall," the kind petrels said to Tom.

8. The petrels spoke to some of the bigger sea-birds, who are sometimes called molly-cocks. 'Come, come, you are greedy things,' they said. 'This young gentleman is going to Mother Carey and wants a share, he says, to the Shiny Wall. Greedy we may be, but lazy we are not,' said one great fat molly-cock. 'We'll help the little lad. So the molly-cocks who were jolly blue took Tom the water-baby with their laughing and joking, they headed towards the cold north, where they would find the Shiny Wall.

9. They swam northwards for many days to places colder than Tom had ever known before. Being a water baby, he did not feel the cold, but was frightened when he saw packs of icebergs bumped together in the sea, glowering and growling as they knocked into each other.

10. The good molly-cock carried Tom safely over the mountains and set him down at the foot of the Shiny Wall. It was a great wall of ice and stretched as far as Tom could see—and so high that nobody could have climbed over. 'Where is the gate?' asked Tom. 'don't see it. There isn't one,' said the molly-cock.

11. 'No gate?' peeped Tom in surprise. 'What am I to do then?' 'I must get to the other side of the Shiny Wall to find Mother Carey. Then you must dive and swim under the great Shiny Wall, if you have the courage,' said the molly-cock. 'I have not come this far to be turned back now,' said Tom, very bravely.

The Water Babies

Once little Tom, who was once a naughty little boy who swept chimneys, becomes a water baby. To show how good he has become he sets off on a journey to the Shiny Wall, a great barrier of ice in the sea. He hopes to find the Other-end-of-Nowhere to help his cruel old master, Mr. Grimes.

1 There was no gale in the Shiny Wall so Tom had to dive down to the bottom of the sea and swim under it. He swam for seven days and nights and he was not a bit frightened. Why should he be? He was a brave lad. On his way he swam through shoals of yellow shrimps that hopped and skipped about and through a crowd of jellyfish of all the colours of the world that neither hopped nor skipped but only dangled and yawned and would not get out of his way. But Tom did not mind them.

2 At last he got to the top of the sea again, to the pool where all the good whales go. A very large pool it was, miles and miles across. Around it were hills of ice. These kept away the storms and clouds keeping Mother Carey's pool calm from one year's end to another. There the good whales lay on the still top. Blue whales, fin whales, and bobble-nosed whales.

3 They were happy, sleepy beasts waiting for Mother Carey to send for them to make them out of old beasts into new. Tom swam up to the nearest whale and asked the way to Mother Carey. There she sits in the middle, said the whale. Tom looked but could see nothing in the middle of the pool except one peaked whorl. That is where you will find her—underneath it, said the whale.

4 What does she do down there? Tom asked. The old whale gave a big yawn and answered. She is busy all the year round making old beasts into new ones. If she makes things into new, said Tom, thinking hard, I suppose she she cuts up a great whale like you into a whole shoal of porpoises. An odd remark the old whale laughed loudly. Run along with you, boy, and find out, he chuckled.

5 Wondering what he might find, Tom swam to the iceberg and dived down beside it. As he swam towards the bottom of the sea, he was passed by a rising cloud of millions of very tiny new-born creatures of more shapes and colours than he had ever dreamed of. They were Mother Carey's children whom she makes out of sea water all day long.

6 Tom expected as most people would to find her as busy as could be but instead of that he came upon the grandest lady he had ever seen a white monkey lady sitting on a white marble throne. She sat quite still looking around with her blue eyes as blue as the sea itself. It is a long time since I have seen a water baby here she said kindly.

7 Tom walked for a long time along the soft ocean floor and soon became aware of a hissing and a roaring as though all the steam engines in the world were working at once. When he came nearer to the noise the water grew boiling hot but that did not hurt him in the least. At last Tom came very close to the Other-end-of-Nowhere. He reached a place which was called Stop. And there he stopped on the edge of a big hole.

8 He went rubbing and tumbling down through the great hole and when he got to the bottom of it he came safely to the shore of the Other-end-of-Nowhere. He saw before him a huge building made of brick. It reminded Tom of a prison and as he walked towards it he had a strange fancy that he might find Mr. Grimes somewhere inside it.

9 Tom told her his errand and how he had been sent to find Mr. Grimes at the Other-end-of-Nowhere. Although Mr. Grimes had treated him cruelly when he had been a chimney sweep Tom had a duty to be kind to him. To show that he had learned his lesson of a good little boy. You are a splendid little fellow said Mother Carey and when she told him the way to go Tom thanked her kindly and scam off with no more delay.

10 It was a kind of small volcano and the steam that came out of it made the water spin round and round in a sort of whirlpool. It made purking noises that reminded Tom that once when chimney-sweeping in a big house he saw a bath emptying itself down the plug-hole. He set himself to catch down it, hoping for the best.

11 Boldly Tom marched towards the building when some thing shouted Stop. It was nothing more than a policeman's truncheon running along without arms and legs. And when the truncheon asked him his business Tom told him that he had come from Mother Carey and was looking for Mr. Grimes.

The Water Babies

[illegible]

4. It was there, some 10 minutes, number 343, and he got the and he was very kind to get a picture taken of him and that the man got him and say that Tom could have a beer, so he then it's much less a pity that I was not a bit though he is putting it in at the night. The day Tom he said that

6. Keep a cool jug in your head, said the trunchion and it popped up just like Punch hitting Grimes such a clack over the head with that iron bar but he ran off but tried to get his hands out to rub the place but he could not for they were stuck fast in the chimney. Every night all the town grumbled Grimes. But if my arms were here you'd not hit me.

8. You may try of course, said the ugly fair. Tom tugged and pulled at the bridle of the chimney but he could not move one. You had best leave me alone, said Grimes. You're good for nothing, the old woman said. This is the first time I've seen you for all the nasty things we done in my life. But it's late now. It's never too late, said the strange lady.

7. Can't I help him to get out of my chimney? asked Tom. Perhaps, answered a solemn voice from behind Tom. He turned round and instantly saw Mrs. Beoworth as he did. When the trunchion saw her it glared both upright & sideways — and Tom made a new bow. Oh Mrs. Beoworth as you did, said Tom. Please may I do something to help poor old Mr. Grimes?

9. She asked if it was Mr. Grimes (she) and if he had his own hands did what Tom had not the strength to do. Then wished he would away from between the bricks and the chimney top in a crumble down. Seeing the Grimes was keen to get out of the chimney, she said she was going to hit him on the head with a thump when Mrs. Beoworth as you did stopped it.

10. If you were me it is the best thing I could do, said the lady. Grimes asked Grimes. As you please, master, said Grimes. You're strange and wiser than I'll do whatever your ladyship says. Grimes stepped out of the chimney and for once he looked as clean and respectable as a master sweep should look.

11. Take him easy, said the lady to the trunchion. It is a useful job to do, let him be sweep out the corner of Mount Etna. Tom looked a little puzzled. Because he had never seen it before. To learn about anything he did not know at the time in Mount Etna was a large volcano in the island of Sicily.

The Water Babies

Since becoming a water baby, Tom, the brave little chimney sweep, goes to a prison at the Oldward of Norfham and sets free the cruel old warden Mr. Grimes. Promising to be good and kind to others, Grimes is sent off on a job, to sweep the crater of Mount Etna.

1 Looking very mean, Mr. Grimes let the police march him off to do the job chosen for him by Mrs. Be-done-by-as-you-do. Tom waved goodbye to his old master and let all anyone know, or does, at home. Grimes is still sweeping the crater of Mount Etna to this very day. Sometimes the volcano gets choked up with too many red-hot cinders and throws them out in showers. Then Mr. Grimes has to work harder as hard to sweep the crater clean before it covers the island of Sicily with ashes.

2 Now, quoth the lady to Tom, your work here is done. You may as well go back again, but I must bandage your eyes first. Tom stood quite still and let the strange lady bandage his eyes with a handkerchief. He did not feel the least bit surprised about it.

3 Not was Tom very surprised by what happened next. In the world of the water babies so many things had taken place that he had ceased to wonder at the magic of them. With one hand Mrs. Be-done-by-as-you-do tied the handkerchief around his eyes and with the other she took him. And you are safe, she said. It seemed to Tom that he had not moved a single step, but when he opened his eyes and looked round him he knew that he was back again on the bottom of the sea close to Saint Brendan's cave.

4 Tom walked on, of the sea and up the gently sloping beach. The first things he saw were the cliffs of Saint Brendan's cave, standing high and steep against the rocky shore. The wind sang softly in the rocks and water sang among the caves.

5 The seabirds also sang as they streamed out into the ocean, but among the songs one came across the water more sweet and clear than the others. It was the song of a young girl's voice and it was the sweetest sound that Tom had ever heard.

5 Tom hurried to find out who was singing and there upon a rock sat the most graceful creature that was ever seen. When Tom came near she squared up and looking it was Ewe the girl. Tom had seen in Hallow-House when he had been sweeping the chimney. Oh what Ewe said
Tom. Oh Tom, please, thought you were never coming.

As I by magic the night just seemed to change. Now you are Mrs. Do as I would be done by and Tom, you are grown quite beautiful now. He opened his mouth to answer. The light, Mrs. Do, come by as you did and the money is his. If it you would be done by me it supposed to be where as now I feel they be just one person. I can't make it out at all. The End

Q Did you? The lady said "Who am I?" You are now the guilty woman who will die the day I want to sweep the streets at Mr. Powell's house. said Tom. Smiling she turned to him. You may see him home with you now she said. Tom has become good by helping Mr. G. more.

Tom looked at Elie and Elie looked at Tom. They might have stood like that for hours. A voice had not been in their attention. Children are not interested in what is in the eye. There stood the ugly man. On the corner of the face was the old Mrs. Genderson as provided him, and the long tale of the children.

Now look again the lark and And once more there was a change, change Now you are better Carey said on the nest when I was under the Shiny Will only the poet wrote the good old whistles go to be made young again it was you who gave me the "I" to the "When" and to the "and" it was here that I found the "I" and the "and" and the "when"

14. Did Tom make Bill's birthday party happen. He did not do it all and in addition it is usually only princes and princesses who do it. But Tom and Elie were so kind and so good that there is no reason to think that they should not be the squire of a prince and princess. There? A very happy of Bill they were very happy.

Jesús Blaseo

ALICE in WONDERLAND

~ & Playing Card Collection ~

Once Upon a Time

4 October 1970 #89 - 2 January 1971 #99

Lewis Carroll

ALICE IN WONDERLAND must be one of the most popular fairy stories ever written, and the characters that appear in the book are known and loved by many children.

The book was written by Lewis Carroll, whose real name was Charles Lutwidge Dodgson, and he was born in 1832. It is strange that a man who could delight so many children with his wonderful tales, was also a brilliant mathematician—a subject which most youngsters hate.

Queen Victoria was very fond of the book, and it is said that she asked the author to send a copy of his next book which turned out to be a book on Mathematics. How disappointed she must have been.

Lewis Carroll was a young man when he wrote Alice in Wonderland, and it may interest you to know that there really was a little girl called Alice. She was the daughter of his friend, H. G. Liddell, dean of Christ Church, Oxford. And it was to her and her two sisters, that Lewis Carroll would tell stories, one of them being Alice in Wonderland.

From the real Alice, we learn that most of Lewis Carroll's stories were told on river expeditions near Oxford, and the day on which Alice in Wonderland was told, was very hot and they all had to take shelter from the sun in a newly-made haystack.

The author copied out the story and gave it to Alice as a Christmas present. It became her most treasured possession, and when she was finally persuaded to sell the story, it was bought in the United States in 1928 for the sum of £15,400.

Starting this week in Once Upon A Time, is the story of Alice in Wonderland. By reading, you will meet strange characters, such as the White Rabbit, the Mad Hatter, and of course—Alice.

Once Upon a Time

EVERY WEDNESDAY

No. 89-24th OCTOBER 1970

Price 14p • 720 up

Alice in Wonderland

ALICE in WONDERLAND

1 Alice was beginning to get very tired of sitting so lonely under the tree and hearing nothing to do. The hot day made her feel very sleepy and stupid and she had begun to think

2 "Then suddenly a White Rabbit ran near her. "In how no deed! shall be too late. It was saying Poor Alice should have no to do about this but at the same it seemed as if

3 Then when the White Rabbit took a watch from its waist pocket and looked at it. Alice jumped to her feet. She was now very hungry so she took from a pocket in its waistcoat pocket a watch to take out of it. So she had and after it

4 She was not in time to see a puff down a hole. Alice and Alice went down after it. never once considering help or help or she was going to get nothing in. The hole was at a depth of a hundred and then it was the end of

5 Poor Alice had not a moment to think how to stop herself and she went falling down and down and down a deep well and when she was found with all sorts of puzzling things

6 "I wonder how many times I have taken. she wonder if. Shall I be right through the 12th to the other side? Suddenly. hump! Down she came upon a heap of seven

7 Alice was not hurt and jumped to her feet in a moment. In front of her was another passage and the White Rabbit was still in sight, hurrying down. It was led as it could go.

8 "Oh my ears and whiskers, how late it is getting!" the White Rabbit was saying. It turned a corner, and when Alice followed round it, the rabbit was no longer in sight.

9 She found herself in a long, low hall. There were a number of doors around the hall, but they were all locked. Alice went up one side and down the other, trying every door and wondering how she was ever to get out again.

10 Then she came upon a table with a glass top. There was nothing on it except a golden key, and Alice's first thought was that it might belong to one of the doors of the hall. At least, can try in the locks, she said to herself.

11 She tried one door after another but, alas, it would not open any of them until she came upon a tiny door only about fifteen inches high. To her delight it fitted.

12 Alice knelt down and looked through the tiny door at the loveliest garden you ever saw. How she longed to get into it—but the door was too small to get through.

ALICE in WONDERLAND

1 Alice wondered how she could get through the tiny door and into the garden so she went back to the glass table. On it she found a bottle, which certainly was not there before.

2 Around the bottle was a label with the words DRINK ME in large letters. Alice drank some and it had a nice mixed flavour of cherry, lemon, pineapple and hot toast.

3 What a curious feeling, said Alice soon after. I must be shutting up like a telescope. So it was indeed. She was now only a few inches high and just the right size for going through the door into the garden.

4 But, alas, for poor Alice. When she got to the tiny door she had forgotten the golden key that would open it. And when she went back to the table for it, she found she could not possibly reach it. Oh dear, how silly of me to put it back on the table, she murmured.

5 She tried her best to climb up one of the table-legs but it was too slippery. When she had bled herself out with trying, the poor little thing sat down and cried.

6 Crying was no use, so Alice looked around and found a cake under the table. EAT ME it said in currents, so Alice took a big bite and next moment she found opening out like the biggest telescope ever.

7 "Crimmer and crumbler" thought Alice. "Goodbye, my dear! For when she looked down they seemed to be almost out of sight. Oh, my poor tea! I wonder who will put your stops on for you now?" she said. Then her head hit the roof.

8 Now she seemed to be miles taller than the glass table. But at last she might reach down and take the golden key from off the top of it. "I must be careful what I drink or eat in future," thought Alice to herself. "But how to open that little garden door?"

9 This she did, but it was no use. She could hardly get a couple of fingers through the tiny opening, let alone her head and shoulders. "How queer everything's getting today," she said.

10 Crouching down and putting her head level with the door, Alice was able to look through into the garden with one eye. But the room was hopeless.

ALICE in WONDERLAND

1. Poor Alice! She had now grown too big to get through the tiny door into the garden, so she sat down and cried shedding gallons of salt tears.

2. Soon there was a large pool all round her several inches deep. Hearing a patter of feet she dried her eyes to see what was coming. It was the White Rabbit. He came bounding along in a great hurry muttering to himself. On the Duchess, the Duchess!

3. The White Rabbit was splendidly dressed, with a pair of gloves in one hand and a fan in the other. If you please sir - Alice began to say in a timid voice. The Rabbit started violently and before Alice could say anything else he dropped the gloves and fan and scoured away into the darkness just as hard as he could go.

4. Alice took up the fan and as the fan and the hall was very the fan and the hall was very hot she kept fanning herself. Dear dear she said. How queer it all is.

5. As she spoke she looked down at her hand and was surprised to see that she had put on one of the Rabbit's gloves. I must have grown small, she said.

6. She was shrinking fast. The cause of it was the fan she was holding, so she dropped it hastily just in time to stop herself from shrinking away altogether. That was a narrow escape, she said, in relief.

1 As it lay the girl down, she went on. As she said these words her feet slipped and in another moment, up she flew. As it was up to her chin in the water, in the deep pool stood by her feet feet.

2 Then she heard something splashing about in the pool, and at first thought it must be a Hippopotamus or a crocodile, with the remembered

3 Would it be of any who he spoke to this thought. thought Ahab. There was no harm in saying so the longer. though she was to see the only out of this pool? in fact of something around. The mouse

4 Then she heard that the land was going to be treated with birds and perhaps that had been. yes. There was a Quail, a Dove, a cat, an Eagle and several other curious creatures. It is a good something

5 And up in black a colored, the whole party burst out of the party gone to the shore, the birds with drooping feathers and the animals with their heads up, as if going down to the 6 There were all dripping wet and cold and uncomfortable. And the mouse, perched on the back of a tortoise called out. Sit down. If you're hungry you dry.

ALICE in WONDERLAND

1 Alice said the queue took us just a bit of anxiety and to dry were at least out of the pool and on dry land. They were all dripping wet, cold and uncomfortable. Sit down all of you," said the Mouse, "I mean to me and I soon make you dry. Are you all ready now?"

2 The Mouse put on a serious air. "Sit, as all would of you please—this is the driest thing known," he said. And he proceeded to tell them about history, which is a very dry subject indeed. So it did not seem to dry them at all.

3 "We're just as wet as ever," said the Dodo, at a loss to its host. "The best thing to get us dry would be a 'drought,'" said Alice. "What's that?" asked Alice.

4 "Why the best way to explain it is to do it," said the Dodo. So a circle was marked out and without so much as a "Grip" to it as and away they all began running round and round and in half an hour they were dry again.

5 The race is over, the Dodo suddenly called out. So they all stopped and crowded round looking. But who has won? Every body has won and all must have prizes," said the Dodo.

6 The whole party crowded round Alice, calling out, "Prizes! Prizes!" Alice put her hand in her pocket and pulled out a bag of forty twenty sweets. These she handed out and there was exactly one each for them.

7 She must have a go at her herself, you know, the Mouse said. Of course she must, agreed the Ducks very seriously. What else have you got in your pocket? Only a thimble, Alice replied.

8 Hand it over, said the Ducks. Then they all rounded round Alice while the Ducks very solemnly presented her with her own thimble. Alice thought it absurd as they clapped and cheered.

9 Happier now, she began to tell the creatures (leaving her feet) I wish could show you the best. No up at home, she said. She is very sweet and her name is Dinah. Who is Dinah? asked the Tortoise and all replied. She is my cat.

10 Alice was always ready to talk about her cat, but just the mention of it caused a sensation in the party. All the creatures gave a gasp of horror and hurried away at once. So Alice was left all alone. I wish I hadn't mentioned Dinah, she sighed.

11 Now Alice began to cry again. But then she heard a little pattering of footsteps and looked up eagerly, half hoping that the friendly Mouse had changed its mind and was coming back to join her. But it was the White Rabbit looking for the groves it had lost. Hello, said Alice.

ALICE in WONDERLAND

1. Oh my fur and whiskers, muttered the White Rabbit as it came up to Alice. Mary Ann, run home this very moment and fetch me a pair of gloves and a fan. Quick.

2. Alice ran off in the direction of the house without trying to explain the mistake the White Rabbit had made. He mistook me for his housemaid and thought I had to get him his gloves and fan.

3. It seemed very queer to be going strands for a White Rabbit, but Alice hurried into the room of the house without knocking and went upstairs. She found her way into a lady like room and on a table were a fan, a pair of white gloves and a bottle. Ah, said Alice.

4. "I know something interesting is sure to happen if I eat or drink anything, so I'll just see what the bottle does. I hope it will make me grow again, for really I'm tired of being small." She took a good long drink.

5. And it was soon too late to wish she hadn't for she grew and grew till she was too big for the room.

6. Alice's huge hand came out through the window much to the surprise of the White Rabbit and his gardener. "Pat, take it away!" squeaked the White Rabbit.

7 Then Alice's foot stretched up and out of the chimney and she heard a ladder being placed in position and the sound of some sort of animal scritch on the chimney quite close.

8 She gave one sharp look and the first thing she heard was a loud shout. 'There goes Bill!' the White Rabbit said as his lizard came tumbling down. 'Catch him, some of you! Hold him!

9 After a minute or two of silence outside Alice heard the White Rabbit say 'A beautiful set up to begin with! Then a shower of little pebbles came in through the window. Some hit Alice, but she noticed that the pebbles were all turning into little cakes.

10 'I eat one of these cakes,' she thought, 'it's sure to make a change in my size and as I can't possibly make me larger, it must make me smaller I suppose.' So she ate one of the cakes and was delighted to find herself shrinking at once.

11 As soon as she was small enough to get through the door Alice ran out of the house and hurried past the crowd of animals.

12 'The first thing we got to do is to find my way into that lovely garden,' Alice thought.

ALICE in WONDERLAND

1 After adventures in the house of the White Rabbit, Alice hurried away through the woods, hoping to find her way into the country of her dream, but she had no real idea how to get it.

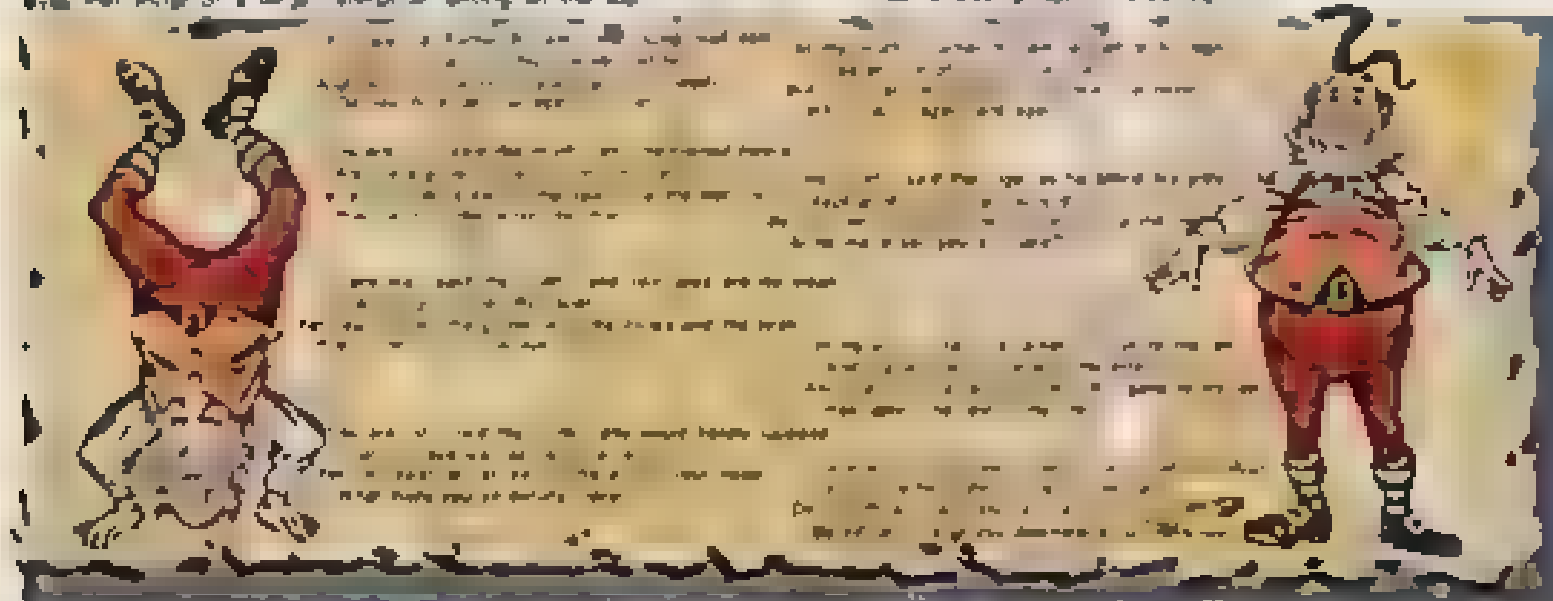

2 Sometimes we get to give up again, the land, I know we ought to eat or drink something or other, but the purpose is what?

3 When she had looked under, and on to the top, and behind it, she thought she might as well sit and wait till it was up or it was down, for it was just as well to wait for a large, sharp, or spring on the top.

4 Taking a further pipe out of its mouth, the steep-up addressed her in a sleepy voice. 'You are just a little harder than to let it go, but I'm not sure of it. I don't know if you can use it and don't keep the same size by it. I'm sure, I'm sure.'

5 It was an impossible thing to do, the only way to get it was to get it, as she had said. But she had said it was a great thing, and she would try to find her way together and bring it back to the world. I'm sure, I'm sure, I'm sure.

6 He did not see, but he came to see. You don't see it right, it's getting more surprising to me. Then, she was a little bit quite a few minutes. The steep-up was the first to see it, and she must be in the other steep-up. I said.

The above information was obtained from the records of the Department of the Interior, Bureau of Indian Affairs, Office of the Commissioner, Washington, D.C.

The following table shows the results of the regression analysis for the dependent variable "Number of children in the household" (N = 1,000). The independent variables are "Age of the head of household" and "Gender of the head of household". The results are as follows:

[illegible]

1. The first step is to identify the problem. This involves understanding the current situation and what needs to be improved.

1. The first step is to identify the problem. In this case, the problem is that the system is not working properly.

1. The first part of the document is a list of references. The references are listed in a standard format, with the author's name, the title of the work, and the publisher. The references are as follows:

1. The first part of the document is a list of references. The references are listed in a standard format, with the author's name, the title of the work, and the publisher. The references are as follows:
2. The second part of the document is a list of references. The references are listed in a standard format, with the author's name, the title of the work, and the publisher. The references are as follows:
3. The third part of the document is a list of references. The references are listed in a standard format, with the author's name, the title of the work, and the publisher. The references are as follows:
4. The fourth part of the document is a list of references. The references are listed in a standard format, with the author's name, the title of the work, and the publisher. The references are as follows:
5. The fifth part of the document is a list of references. The references are listed in a standard format, with the author's name, the title of the work, and the publisher. The references are as follows:
6. The sixth part of the document is a list of references. The references are listed in a standard format, with the author's name, the title of the work, and the publisher. The references are as follows:
7. The seventh part of the document is a list of references. The references are listed in a standard format, with the author's name, the title of the work, and the publisher. The references are as follows:
8. The eighth part of the document is a list of references. The references are listed in a standard format, with the author's name, the title of the work, and the publisher. The references are as follows:
9. The ninth part of the document is a list of references. The references are listed in a standard format, with the author's name, the title of the work, and the publisher. The references are as follows:
10. The tenth part of the document is a list of references. The references are listed in a standard format, with the author's name, the title of the work, and the publisher. The references are as follows:

6. Then back the Duchess turned her and it was decided to reach a tree that she just had to run back into the wood for fear of the hearing her. "It wouldn't do to appear early," she thought, a farthest thought she laughter with the more began to come into her eyes. "Wonder why the Queen doing this. It's a bit of a game."

7. When she had stopped laughing, she was turned to the forest. The light of morning was gone and the twilight she was sitting on the ground, the night slowly and he did.

8. "Please," said Alice, "how are I to go on?" At a distance the door of the forest opened and a light green came running out of a gap in the wood at the foot of the tree. "I brought it the end of the road and bring the price."

9. A light and the way of things began my light from inside the forest. It was the light of the sun and the light of the moon. But she decided to go on.

10. She stopped and a light came from the end of the road. The Duchess was sitting in a great nursing baby. He could see sitting a pot which seemed to be up of wood. In many ways the light seemed to be a light of the sun.

11. Then suddenly the light seemed to show everything within reach of the Duchess and the light.

ALICE in WONDERLAND

any things at this study site—and now concern the Duck Pond trees he built. And if you may notice it, let I say, as you said, I must go and get ready to pray tonight with the women. When I see enough for birds, and you, I say, I think of, he

He then went on and said as he sat back in his seat outside but I grunted again and she looked at me with her head tilted and she said, "You're not like a normal person."

3. If we're going to work APC is big. I have no plans to do so. I just have been so busy with other things and my mind is not on APC at all.

4. Once began to think up a paper on "even the larger who might be a part of the group" and became started to add "Chapman's not sitting in a nearby, but would you not and what may ought to go from next" and asked

5 In that direction, toward the Cathedral, at walking the pace around with a cane. Just there was a Man. I said: You are not alone, here come you, the Deacons, they are with you, and

6. Having said this the Chrysler car started to disappear. It went quite low - 15 to 20 cent feet and landed up with the gun which remained some 1000 ft above the rest of it had vanished.

14 The March Hare thing we ever seen thought Alice as she walked on. Soon she came to the house of the March Hare who sat at a table with the Hatter and a Dormouse fast asleep.

15 The room! The room! they shouted out when they saw Alice coming. There's plenty of room said Alice indignantly. The wings of the birds of the table were empty and shut up down.

16 It was very civil of you to sit down without being invited said the March Hare. Your hair wants cutting said the Hatter. You shouldn't make personal remarks—it's very rude said Alice.

17 What day of the month is it asked the March Hare as he took a watch out of his pocket and shook it. In two days wrong. Shouldn't put butter in it said the Hatter.

18 He took the watch and then dipped it into his cup of tea. And some crumbs must have got into it as well off the bread he ate he grumbled.

19 Alice decided to go and the last thing she saw was the Hatter pouring tea over the Dormouse.

Once Upon a Time

EVERY WEDNESDAY

No. 97 • 18th DECEMBER 1970

PRICE 18 7½p

ALICE in WONDERLAND

1. "Really!" said Alice, when the Hatter poured hot tea on her feet. The sleeping Dormouse, with a nose as long as a turtleneck, then said, "I'll get you a new pair of shoes," and the Hatter, as he and the March Hare then popped the white rabbit into the teapot.

2. This piece of goodness was more than Alice could bear. She got up in great disgust and walked away. Then a little way off she noticed a tree which had a door in it. Her little curiosity she thought, "May as well go in at once, but I cannot imagine where it might lead me to."

3. She walked down a passage and found herself at last in the beautiful garden she had been trying to visit. It was a large rose-tree. The roses on it were white, but there were three gardeners busy painting them red. How strange, thought Alice to herself. They look like playing cards.

4. Very curious Alice went nearer to watch them, and just as she came up to them the king of them dropped their paint brushes and stood still as though with sudden fright. "The Queen! The Queen is coming!" one of them shouted.

5. The three gardeners instantly threw themselves flat on their faces as the Royal procession arrived. In front were the King and Queen of Hearts. Behind them, marching in step, came soldiers and last the gardeners. They were all shaped like playing cards.

6. Some of the soldiers were decorated with diamond markings, others with hearts and clubs and spades. They carried spears all topped with playing card markings, and they looked very sinister as they marched behind the proud King and Queen of Hearts.

What do you think will happen to the U.S. economy in the next few years? Do you think the U.S. will be able to maintain its position as a world leader? Do you think the U.S. will be able to maintain its position as a world leader? Do you think the U.S. will be able to maintain its position as a world leader?

1. I have your letter to me and the letter to me of you
 2. I have your letter to me and the letter to me of you
 3. I have your letter to me and the letter to me of you
 4. I have your letter to me and the letter to me of you
 5. I have your letter to me and the letter to me of you
 6. I have your letter to me and the letter to me of you
 7. I have your letter to me and the letter to me of you
 8. I have your letter to me and the letter to me of you
 9. I have your letter to me and the letter to me of you
 10. I have your letter to me and the letter to me of you

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem. This involves gathering information about the situation and understanding the needs of the stakeholders involved.

[illegible]

...the ... of ...

[illegible]

7. When they reached the courtyard a great crowd was going in and out of the door and looking at what they had to do. This was the way the White Rabbit was going when he looked over his shoulder and saw the girl standing there.

8. Alice started to ask the White Rabbit a question but it had something to answer. He was so fast that she could not put her hand to her mouth. 'What for?' she said. 'I don't know what the thing is all about but that's what I ought to go to.'

9. The King and Queen of Hearts were seated on their throne when Alice came in. The King of Hearts was sitting on a chair and the Queen of Hearts was sitting on a chair. They were both looking at Alice and she was looking at them.

10. First the accusation and the King. The White Rabbit is so fast that the Queen of Hearts she made some of it all on a summer day. The King of Hearts he is most late and late from an old fair dress.

11. The White Rabbit was so fast that the Queen of Hearts she made some of it all on a summer day. The King of Hearts he is most late and late from an old fair dress.

12. The White Rabbit was so fast that the Queen of Hearts she made some of it all on a summer day. The King of Hearts he is most late and late from an old fair dress.

ALICE in WONDERLAND

As I started to rise up to go, I noticed the end of a foot of gold armor the shape of which I had seen when I was in the forest. The foot was raised up and the pump up to the top of the foot. The foot was looking at the pump and the pump was looking at the foot.

As I started to rise up to go, I noticed the end of a foot of gold armor the shape of which I had seen when I was in the forest. The foot was raised up and the pump up to the top of the foot. The foot was looking at the pump and the pump was looking at the foot.

As I started to rise up to go, I noticed the end of a foot of gold armor the shape of which I had seen when I was in the forest. The foot was raised up and the pump up to the top of the foot. The foot was looking at the pump and the pump was looking at the foot.

As I started to rise up to go, I noticed the end of a foot of gold armor the shape of which I had seen when I was in the forest. The foot was raised up and the pump up to the top of the foot. The foot was looking at the pump and the pump was looking at the foot.

As I started to rise up to go, I noticed the end of a foot of gold armor the shape of which I had seen when I was in the forest. The foot was raised up and the pump up to the top of the foot. The foot was looking at the pump and the pump was looking at the foot.

As I started to rise up to go, I noticed the end of a foot of gold armor the shape of which I had seen when I was in the forest. The foot was raised up and the pump up to the top of the foot. The foot was looking at the pump and the pump was looking at the foot.

7 Alice suddenly felt very brave. But as she looked these cards up and down, she felt a little nervous. "I'm not a playing card," she thought. "I'm a girl. I've got a head, arms, legs, and a heart. And all the rest of them— and I'm a girl. I'm not a playing card." She felt a little nervous.

8 But you can't hurt me, she thought. I'm not a playing card. I'm a girl. I've got a head, arms, legs, and a heart. And all the rest of them— and I'm a girl. I'm not a playing card. She felt a little nervous.

9 The playing cards then all rose in the air above her and Alice gave a little scream. She felt a little nervous. "I'm not a playing card," she thought. "I'm a girl. I've got a head, arms, legs, and a heart. And all the rest of them— and I'm a girl. I'm not a playing card." She felt a little nervous.

10 It was all a sudden surprise. The playing cards were all round her and Alice found herself lying on the ground. She felt a little nervous. "I'm not a playing card," she thought. "I'm a girl. I've got a head, arms, legs, and a heart. And all the rest of them— and I'm a girl. I'm not a playing card." She felt a little nervous.

11 Then she woke up and found herself lying on the ground. She felt a little nervous. "I'm not a playing card," she thought. "I'm a girl. I've got a head, arms, legs, and a heart. And all the rest of them— and I'm a girl. I'm not a playing card." She felt a little nervous.

12 It was all a sudden surprise. The playing cards were all round her and Alice found herself lying on the ground. She felt a little nervous. "I'm not a playing card," she thought. "I'm a girl. I've got a head, arms, legs, and a heart. And all the rest of them— and I'm a girl. I'm not a playing card." She felt a little nervous.

Jesús Blaseo

Gulliver's Travels

Once Upon a Time

9 Jan. 1971 #100 - 27 Feb. 1971 #107

Once Upon a Time

Gulliver's Travels

1 It was early in the month of May 1699 that the sailing ship Antelope left England on a voyage to the East Indies. On board was Lemuel Gulliver, the ship's doctor, and all went well until some-where in the Indian Ocean, there arose a terrible storm.

2 The wind was so fierce and the sea so rough that the ship began to sink. There was nothing the captain could do to save it, and when the masts started to snap off he ordered everyone aboard to leap into the sea, and try to save themselves if they could.

3 Gulliver was among those who leapt into the sea, and all night long he struggled to remain afloat in the huge waves. When morning came he found himself alone, floating on a calm sea. All the other people from the ship had vanished.

4 "What will become of me now?" he thought to himself. Gulliver kept on swimming towards an island, and after a struggle he dragged himself ashore. Thankful to be safe on firm ground again, he sank down. "I can see no sign of houses or people living here," he gasped. "But I am too tired to worry about that now. What I most need is a long sleep to revive me and give me strength."

5 He must have slept soundly for several hours. When he woke up, Gulliver cried to rise but found himself unable to move. His arms and legs, and even his hair, were pinned down by thin ropes.

6 In a little time he felt something moving across his chest and he saw that it was a tiny human creature, not six inches tall. There were others around him and they climbed on him like ants.

7 "Shoot! Shoot—go away!" he shouted and the roar of his voice was so loud that the tiny figures jumped off and ran away. But soon some of them came back and loosed off a shower of arrows which picked Gulliver like needles.

8 He decided it was wiser to be still, and the arrows stopped coming at him, so he opened his mouth and pointed to it to show he wanted food.

9 The tiny creatures seemed to understand that Gulliver was very hungry and at once about a hundred of them eagerly hurried away.

10 They came back after a time, bringing baskets and trays of food and barrels of wine.

Gulliver's Travels

1. Hundreds of the tiny Lilliput people hurried away to bring food and drink to the great giant who had fallen. I came to these people. They brought chickens, I could hear, that sat leg up on the shoulders, and some eggs of something that looked like feathers. It was made of very

2. The Lilliput people showed as few as great eagles. In an hour, minutes or less, more than enough to feed a thousand of them. I was much surprised they passed it by me to give them all a share. Some of them I had thought to have seen in the great hall of the city, but they were not there.

3. They brought him two more chickens and when Gulliver had drunk them he felt so strong he came down the tiny people at the island. I had up to me and thought of his face. I was so happy to have the great man so near me. I had never seen a man so big before.

4. And not knowing that the Lilliput people had got a sheep, they brought in the same, and he was so strong he could jump and walk and run like the King of the Lilliput people. They were surprised when they saw him and he was so strong that he could jump and walk and run like the King of the Lilliput people.

5. They are certainly terrible very busy. First running about making a rush for the light, and then they make a great noise and make a great noise. Then they made a noise about seven feet long.

6. At the end of this noise, they put the sheep to the ground. I was so surprised when they put the sheep to the ground, I was so surprised when they put the sheep to the ground, I was so surprised when they put the sheep to the ground.

[illegible]

B. C. was with it before and after and he said as they went through the doors of the King's College and through the streets and about four and a half inches high. There were hundreds of the people and that was about thirty to thirty five hundred the capital city of [redacted] and about half a million people.

5. He's a man you'd only be a short distance from ordinary humanity but for the fact that he is a very good and hard worker. There's just no more going at that. That's how strong he is.

10 All night long they roared. At intervals being checked and quelled under the danger of lightning and a cold breeze but as they were within sight of the city, the great little Gull-like birds could breathe and uttering their shrill whistle to each other as if to denote the danger of night the sound of the thunder was kept.

Gulliver's Travels

1 Poor Gulliver was still lying flat on a sort of sledge on wheels, tied down by many ropes, and after much pulling and puffing the little people of Lilliput brought him to their city. There they halted outside an old temple, the largest building they had. It was to be Gulliver's home.

2 Naturally, the tiny humans were afraid of the big giant they had found on the seashore and they set about putting chains round Gulliver's ankles, fixing them to the wall. Then the King came along to look at the huge prisoner.

3 Surprised that Gulliver should not move very far, the King then ordered that the ropes that bound him should be cut. Thus Gulliver was able to rise to his full height, towering above the tiny people who pointed up at him. He's a giant, they shouted in their shrill little voices. See how his head almost touches the sky. For his own part Gulliver was just as amazed at the size of the Lilliput people. 'I can hardly believe it,' he said to himself. 'How can humans be so small?' Then a shrill yapping noise attracted his attention and, looking down, Gulliver could see a terrier dog no bigger than his thumb.

4 When night had come a glared to become quite cool so Gualter decided to pass shelter and warmth inside the pavilion. It was then that he realised that being a guest in a land where everything was so different was not very comfortable. To get inside to sleep he had to struggle and squall.

5 Next day, the King arrived to see how his people were and spent the night and then the shade of the temple came a drop of rain. Later the king and the King. It seems that he did not sleep for such.

6 The King could see what was wrong in his cramped quarters. Gualter was finding the stone floor of the temple a little hard. So he at once gave orders to his people that a bed was to be made of sufficient size to give the King the most comfortable sleep.

7 The bed then six hundred of the people's beds were brought on carts and these were pushed into the temple and then squashed together to form one great big bed. It was hard work for the little people and Gualter was very grateful for their efforts.

8 When the King and Queen came to visit him on the following day they found him looking very cheerful. Gualter listened most carefully to their voices to try and pick up the language.

9 Among the first words he learned were those which helped him to ask the King if he could have the chair taken from his legs and he was delighted when the King agreed.

Gulliver's Travels

1 And this was the first of the great wonders which I saw. For I thought that I should be able to see up to the top of the mountain, but I was so small that I could not see the top of the mountain, and I was so small that I could not see the top of the mountain.

2 I was so small that I could not see the top of the mountain, and I was so small that I could not see the top of the mountain.

3 They were so small that I could not see the top of the mountain, and I was so small that I could not see the top of the mountain.

4 They pushed and heaved and suddenly the mountain rose up before me, and I was so small that I could not see the top of the mountain, and I was so small that I could not see the top of the mountain.

5 In the end, they were so small that I could not see the top of the mountain, and I was so small that I could not see the top of the mountain.

6 They were so small that I could not see the top of the mountain, and I was so small that I could not see the top of the mountain.

7 Gulliver could not help chuckling to himself. But there was one object in his trouser-pocket that they had not yet discovered, and he pulled it out, thinking that it would cause even more excitement for them.

8 It was Gulliver's watch. To the Lilliputians it appeared as a great engine of some kind, made of metal and marked on one side by strange figures. They stared back in surprise. The mighty engine makes a noise, gasped the little King. 'What is it for?'

9 Gulliver did his best to explain that it was his watch and that it enabled him to tell the time. The King and his little people looked at all the things for a long while. They were things of great wonder, the like of which they had never seen.

10 But then the curious King demanded to be shown the working of the pistols. 'Very well, Your Majesty,' Gulliver agreed, 'but I must warn you not to be afraid. He was very careful to load the pistols with only a small amount of gunpowder.'

11 Then he let them off in the air. They made two loud but harmless bangs, which caused sudden panic among the Lilliputians.

12 Several fell down as though struck dead and the rest went rushing away. 'Come back,' said Gulliver.

Gulliver's Travels

1 After showing the tiny people of the island of Lilliput what he had in his pockets, causing them great wonder and astonishment, Gulliver was given his freedom to go wherever he wished. His too looked in great wonder and astonishment at the miniature cattle, never tiring of watching them grazing.

2 One day when Gulliver was standing beside a cliff, the little King of Lilliput and his ministers rode up and came as close to his ear as they could. "I seek your help on a serious matter," said the King.

3 "We have enemies on the island of Blefuscu and we have been in a state of war for many years. It started when we disagreed about which end of a boiled egg should be broken first," went on the King. "We say the smaller end, but they say the bigger end."

4 Gulliver thought it was a silly argument to go to war about, but he kept a serious face and looked out over the sea. "Is that the island of Blefuscu yonder?" he asked. The King nodded. "Yes," he agreed. "They have a fleet of warships ready to attack us."

5 "Do not be alarmed, Your Majesty," said Gulliver, wading into the sea. "I will do my best to help you, because you have been kind to me."

6 The island of Blefuscu was only half a mile away, not a great distance to Gulliver, who easily swam it.

7. In less than half an hour the blue savanna, as the Lilliputian people called him, arrived in the harbour of Blahucsu and stood up in the middle of the fleet of enemy ships. And the sight of his huge figure towering above them gave the Blahucsu men a fright.

8. They had never seen such a giant before and many of them jumped from the decks of the warships in terror to swim to the shore if they could. Others remained aboard, shivering and shelling with fright. 'I'm not here to hurt you,' cried Gulliver.

9. The roar of his voice made them squeal even more, but taking no notice of their struggles Gulliver scooped them up from the sea and put them back on board the ships as gently as he could. They ran through his web fingers like a swarm of scared ants.

10. Then when there were no more to be rescued, Gulliver took hold of the mooring lines of the ships and broke them. To him, of course, the ships' hammers were no tougher than string. He smiled to himself at the thought of being a giant of such power.

11. Your plan was to sail to Lilliput, and so you shall, my friends, he chuckled, and he started up, wading through the sea.

12. Dragging the warships behind him like a fleet of wry loads, Gulliver headed back towards Lilliput.

Gulliver's Travels

The King of Lilliput and all his courtiers were waiting at the royal port anxious to see the result of Gulliver's trip to the enemy island of Blefuscu. They saw the warships moving towards them but for a while did not see Gulliver, who was up to his neck in water at the deepest part of the sea. The enemy ships are attacking us, groaned the King, until the giant figure of Gulliver came striking into the shallow water and was seen to be dragging the entire fleet of enemy warships behind him. To Gulliver the ships were no larger than the toy boats he had made when a young boy.

2 A great cheer went up from the tiny people. "Our enemies have been defeated, thanks to the Man Mountain," they shouted. But the first thing Gulliver did was to make sure that the King of Lilliput and the King of Blefuscu got together on his hand and made peace.

3 So the war between the people of Blefuscu and the people of Lilliput came to an end, and in the months that followed Gulliver was able to wander around the island, seeing how the tiny humans lived and what their customs were.

4. Bit by bit, Gulliver began to feel a little unhappy about the trouble he was causing to the little people, for it needed three hundred cooks to prepare a meal and took up much of their food.

5. Though he was always treated with kindness, Gulliver began to get homesick. Then, one day, a messenger arrived on horseback with news about a great ship he had just seen.

6. Excited, Gulliver hurried to a creek and there, to his great joy, he saw a ship's keel, which had floated in on the tide. It was battered and weather-beaten, but Gulliver was thrilled to see it.

7. He dragged it as far out of the water as he could and set about repairing it, helped by the eager little Lilliput workers.

8. Good fortune has thrown this boat into my hands, thought Gulliver. Now, I can return home.

Gulliver's Travels

1. The ship's lifeboat that had been cast ashore on the island of Lilliput was a lucky find for Gulliver who with the help of the little people worked hard to make it seaworthy again. He himself collected the iron-trunks to use in the strengthening of the damaged boat and when he explained that he needed this the Lilliputians generously collected bits of iron carrying brass to a bit piece of ground near the water's edge.

2. There came the task of spreading the sheets of cloth out and stitching them together. Everybody lent a hand men and women and children. They sewed and measured and did not even talk of food and drink which were brought to them at their place of work.

3. At last they had a piece of cloth so big that they marvelled at the size of it. Gulliver himself then took a hand in the making of a cushion and a rug, showing them the right angles to cut and then instructing the little people how they were to be stitched.

4. And while the sails were being got ready another working party got busy on the task of making oars for the boat. Their tallest trees were cut down and trimmed and shaped as Gulliver wanted.

5. The air was full of wood-shavings, which were carried away in basket-loads. But by far the oars took shape for the happy little people of Lilliput were clever craftsmen very proud of their work.

6 Gulliver was proud of them too, when he checked the boat and ran up the sails. What wonderful people they are, he thought to himself. The ropes ran easily and when the sails flew into position and caught the slight breeze, he was thrilled to feel the boat move slightly, as though anxious to get to the open sea.

7 There was no doubt in his mind that the boat was seaworthy. Next came the task of putting supplies on board and a number of cows and sheep were driven across a gangplank. These will provide food for the lean mountain, said the Lilliputians, so they also rolled up barrels of drinking water and wine.

8 Gulliver was thrilled and excited. "At last everything is ready and I can start my homeward journey," he said. There was a time when I thought I would never leave this island, attractive though it is and full of such charming little people. Though I am homesick, I shall miss them all very much.

9 And when the royal coach drove up on the cliff top, Gulliver bent down and said goodbye to the King and Queen. Thank you for all your kindness, gracious Majesty, he said. A no: forget you.

10 Gulliver pushed the boat away from the shore. The weather was perfect, so he set the sails and sent the craft surging for the open sea, with the shrill goodbyes sounding from Lilliput.

11 Half a mile out, Gulliver could still see the island, but the tiny people were invisible to him. "Who in the world will believe me when I tell of my adventures on Lilliput?" he thought.

Gulliver's Travels

1 Gulliver had spent many happy months on the island of Lilliput among the tiny little people and he was a little sad at the thought of leaving them. But he knew, as he ate the food they had given him, that it was for the best.

2 "They were so very kind to me," he murmured to himself, "but there is no doubt that I was a burden to them for at one meal I ate enough to keep a hundred of them in food for a week. So it is best I shall make the effort to return to my own home." He settled down in the boat and went to sleep.

3 The sea was calm and dawn broke sharp and clear. Gulliver stretched himself and glanced around. Suddenly he saw something that made him jump excitedly to his feet. On the horizon he saw a ship, a proud and splendid merchantman, by the look of her.

4 For a moment Gulliver could hardly believe his eyes. He knew that ships were hardly ever seen in this part of the ocean, but he was determined to attract attention if he could. He raised the boat's sails, then stood up and waved until his arm grew tired.

5 "Where is the look-out? Does he not see me?" he groaned. Desperate to be seen, he raised his two pistols and fired them.

6 The double-crack of the pistol shots gained a response that gladdened Gulliver's heart. The merchantman put up a flag which showed she was British and then sounded off one of her cannons with a boom like distant thunder. "Ahoy!" shouted Gulliver.

7. Slowly the big ship altered course and turned in the direction of Gulliver's boat. In a few minutes Gulliver was bumping alongside. 'Thank you, captain,' he called out, 'climbing to the deck.' 'I'm delighted to come aboard.'

8. Captain Forster, master of the merchant-ship, asked Gulliver into his cabin, for he was curious to hear the captain's own story. And when Gulliver had finished telling him about the land of Lilliput, the captain shook his head. 'Who could believe such a tale?' he asked. 'It is all impossible.'

9. Gulliver was prepared for this, however. 'My good captain, do not blame me for having doubts,' he said. 'But I am not making the story up. I can assure you. And for proof he opened the canvas bag he had brought with him and to the astonishment of the captain, put the tiny Lilliputians on the table.'

10. After that, Captain Forster had not the slightest doubt that Gulliver's story was true. Such an island may never be discovered again, he said. 'I cannot delay my ship any longer, but must sail for home.'

11. So after many months, Gulliver returned to England, where the story of his amazing travels was told over and over again. People never seemed to tire of it, which was lucky for him.

12. The tiny little cows and sheep brought him great wealth, and everywhere in the country there were huge crowds wanting to see them. But no one saw Lilliput again, not even Gulliver.

Jesús Blaseo

THE GOLDEN BOX

Once Upon a Time

13 March 1971 #109 - 17 April 1971 #114

Once Upon a Time

EVERY WEDNESDAY

No. 108 • 13th March 1971

PRICE 7½p • (1/6)

The Golden Sax
Inside on page 2

THE GOLDEN BOY

1. From early on, the little boy, a handsome young man by the name of Lorenzo, who lived deep in the country with his mother and father, he worked hard and was happy until one day when he began to think about the world outside. "I have heard that there are towns and cities out yonder," he said to himself.

2. The more he thought about it, the more he wanted to leave the farm. So he went to his mother and told her about it. She being a woman of great understanding did not plead with him to stay. "Go then, my son," she said, "Take these few belongings with you and seek your fortune with my blessing."

3. Passing through the forest, Lorenzo came to where his father was chopping wood. "Oh said to leave you father," he said, "but I have heard of you and I wonder what has become of the edge of the forest." "Very well, my son," his father replied, "You have been a great joy to me and have shared richly in the hard work I do, and share my greatest possession with you. Take this golden box but open it only if your life is in danger."

4. Thinking his father had promised to do as he had been told, Lorenzo set out on his quest. Soon he left the forest behind him and wandered with anxiety and hunger to him, he ate a small meal, as his mother had given him, but by nightfall he was hungry again and very tired. Then he saw a great house ahead of him. "I have never seen such a large and splendid place before," he said, "However, when he told and ask for food and shelter."

5 So Lorenzo knocked at the kitchen door and was greeted by a serving-woman, who invited him in. "Sit you down at that table, young man," she said. "I will bring you food and drink, for I would not like it to be said that there is no welcome for a tired traveller in the home of the Duke of Dravonia."

6 Lorenzo was thankful for her kindness and ate well. But as he finished the meal, the door opened and into the kitchen came the most beautiful girl he had ever seen. "I am the Duke's daughter, Rosina," she told him. And they stared at each other for many minutes, for they had both taken deeply in love.

7 Indeed, Rosina was so much in love that she hurried to her father and told him about the handsome young man. But the Duke of Dravonia was well known to be a hard man. "Prrmph!" he growled. "I suspect that this fellow is a worthless scoundrel, who hopes to marry you and get a good share of my money. I will set him a task to do and, if he fails, I'll chop off his head."

8 He called Lorenzo into the room. "I don't know who you are, young man, but you will have to prove yourself very clever to win my daughter," he said, pointing to a picture on the wall. "By eight o'clock tomorrow morning you must make a large lake outside my palace deep enough for great ships to sail upon it. If you succeed you win my daughter. Fail, and you lose your head."

THE GOLDEN BOY

1 When he went to bed, Lorenzo knew that he would never go to sleep. At first, when I arrived at this castle and fell in love with the Duke's daughter, Rosina, I was the happiest man in the world," he said. And now, am no more miserable for I fail to complete the Duke's task by eight tomorrow. I will die.

2 Suddenly remembering the golden box given to him by his own father, Lorenzo snapped open the lid—and out jumped three tiny men with big, twitching noses. "We are your servants," they said. "What do you want, Lorenzo?" "Alas, want too much," Lorenzo sighed. "I need a robe with silver on it in a few hours."

3 "Is that all?" asked one of the little men, with a snarl of scorn. "It was hardly worth opening the box for such a simple task. However, we do have a few moments to spare, so we will attend to it at once. And away they whizzed through the window into the moonlight. Father did tell me to open the box if my life was in danger," said Lorenzo. "I hope it works."

4 After that he fell asleep. Half the night he dreamed of Rosina, the Duke's beautiful daughter, and half the night he dreamed of what might happen to him in the morning. So it was not really surprising that he was nervous and shaking when he walked down on the stroke of eight next morning. "Dare I open the door and look out?" he asked himself. "My legs feel like stalks of jelly."

5. But when he did open the door and walk outside the castle he saw a sight almost too amazing to be believed. There, in front of the castle, just as the Duke had demanded was now a great lake of shimmering water so deep that a whole fleet of stately navy ships sailed upon it. "How do you like it?" asked the tiny men

6. "I can scarcely believe it," Lorenzo replied. "Last night it was just a grassy meadow and look at it now—a huge lake with ships proudly sailing on it. This is magic indeed, my little friends." "Oh, it was nothing really," they chuckled. "But now please put us back in the box so that we can sleep."

7. When Rosina saw what had happened, she clapped her hands with joy. "Oh, how wonderful that Lorenzo did not fail in the task my father set him," she said. "Now he must consent to our marriage."

8. But when the Duke of Dravonda also saw what had happened, he merely frowned and scratched the end of his chin. "Hum!" he said. "Hum!" And still not wishing to let his daughter marry a farmer's boy, he said, "Oh, that was only your FIRST task."

9. The Duke looked at the lake. It was so big that he could hardly see the other side. "What I need is a bridge across it," he declared. "Make me one by eight tomorrow morning, young man, or you will die. A bridge across all that?" gasped Lorenzo. "But it is not possible!"

THE GOLDEN BOX

1 The Duke of Dravonia was a hard man and he did not want his daughter to marry Lorenzo the farmer's boy so he him a task which seemed impossible to build a mighty bridge across a lake of ships which Lorenza had made appear outside the night before

2 The young man is clever but this time he will fail chuckled the Duke Then I can make sure that my daughter Rosina will never marry him But when he went to the window and looked out the smile faded from his face and he gasped

3 Outside was the great lake with the proud ships sailing on it and wonder of wonders there stretched across the water a huge bridge built so tall that the ships could sail beneath it without their masts touching I don't believe it he said

4 But it was true enough Thanks to the little magic men from the golden box Lorenzo had been able to make the great bridge appear in just a few seconds and now he hoped that the Duke would keep his promise and let him marry his daughter

5 And when the little men came floating in through the window he caught them on the palms of his hands—can never thank you enough, my friends—he told them. This is the second time that you have saved my life and I am grateful.

6 Boldly Lorenzo then went to the Duke. I have carried out your orders sir—he said. The bridge is across the lake as you wished and now humbly ask that you allow me to marry your daughter Rosina, for I am sure that I can make her happy.

7 The Duke, however, was not a man of his word. 'Hum—ho—hum!' he spluttered. 'I must admit that you have done rather well, but I will agree only if you can produce for me a splendid castle mounted upon pillars of solid gold by the morning.'

8 Once again Lorenzo sighed and opened the golden box and let out the three little magic men. 'I am afraid I must ask you yet another favour—and hope that it will be the last for many a long day, my faithful friends—he said. 'Would it be possible for you to carry out the Duke's wish?' 'Nothing could be easier'—was their reply.

9 Lorenzo awoke as he watched them fly away into the night, then he himself went to bed and slept peacefully and well. By now he knew that his happy little helpers from within the golden box seemed to be able to do anything asked of them. So early next morning, he was delighted but not too surprised to see a mighty castle in position by the side of the lake. It had towers and flags and stood upon solid gold pillars that gleamed in the sunshine.

THE GOLDEN BOY

1 With the help of the three little magic men in the golden box Lorenzo had completed the third step set him by the Duke of Granada. The third step was to write out in golden letters to prove the Duke could not refuse to allow the young farmer's boy to marry his daughter Rufina, and his wedding took place.

2 After it was over Lorenzo showed his beautiful bride how he had performed the difficult steps. And when the three little men flew out of his pocket box she smiled at them. "What more be able to make you do?" she told them. The magic men laughed but said "Oh say no more. To us it was easy."

3 In the days that followed, Rufina and Lorenzo were very happy, and even the hard-hearted old Duke seemed to enjoy having his father's boy as a son-in-law. They liked nothing better than to go out riding together in the forest. "This is truly wonderful for me," said Lorenzo. "Nothing can go wrong."

4 But had a woman been at his room at the castle he might have thought differently. For at that moment one of the men servants was at the door tidying up, and he came upon the golden box. "What might this be?" he thought. "I haven't seen the trace of it before. What can be ahead?"

5 Greedy and curious, he lifted the lid, and then got the surprise of his life. For instead of finding a few gold coins inside the box, he discovered the three little magic men! 'What do you wish for us?' asked one of them. 'We are the servants of whoever opens the box. Tell us your need and we will supply it.'

6 For a moment or two the servant just stared at them in great wonder. Then he began to think that this perhaps was the moment he had been longing for. 'If you can perform any task then I command you to take this palace away from this spot and place it in another part of the country,' he told the tiny magic men.

7 'That is easily done, O master,' they chuckled. One of them snapped his fingers, another pointed into the distance, and the third said, 'Fly great palace through the air—we master wants you over there. And with a whoosh the great palace flew away.'

8 Tired but happy Lorenzo, Rosina and he Dave presently made their way back home—and you can imagine their surprise when they came to the spot where the great palace should have been. 'It's all gone!' screamed the Duke. 'It has vanished into thin air. What sort of trickery is this?' Lorenzo gasped and thought, 'Why have my little magic friends done this to me?'

THE GOLDEN BOX

1 When Lorenz, fleeing his wife and the Duke of Jeremia returned from their horse ride they were shocked to find that the splendid castle had disappeared. The Duke turned angrily on Lorenz. By some clever industry you produced the axe for me and in return showed me to marry my daughter. He said. Now I need you to lead my castle.

2 As he rode away Lorenz thought hard. I believe I can guess what has happened. he said to himself. Somebody one of the servants perhaps found the golden box in my room and opened it letting out the three little magic men. And it responded to the wish they have transferred the castle away.

3 Without the golden box Lorenz felt sure he no longer had any means of magic to help him and he wandered on through the forests bewildered and unhappy. Where can I get help in my search for the lost castle? he wondered. It did not find it then I shall also lose my lovely wife. After a while he came to a strange place. the Kingdom of Mice.

4 Finding Lorenz was in danger with the Kingdom of Mice and upon a tree branch he saw a very mouse figure wearing a crown. I am the mouse king. I said to Lorenz. can you hear me and even that you are very unhappy. Pray tell me what troubles you friend.

5 Lorenze told the Mouse King about the vanished castle and the golden box. "I doubt if Your Mouse Majesty can help me," he said. But the Royal Mouse was only too willing to try. He called in all his subjects, who assembled in a squeaking circle. When they were asked if any of them had seen the lost castle, one of the mice stepped forward. "Yes I have," it said. "I know where it is."

6 The little mouse offered to guide Lorenze to the castle, so the farm-boy lost no time in getting into the saddle. "Don't worry about me, good sir," squeaked the mouse. "I can ride very well at the back, behind you." It climbed up the horse's tail.

7 So they set off together on their long journey. Lorenze did not know where he was going, but followed directions from the tiny mouse guide. "Take the path to the left here," the mouse told him. "Two miles along, go to the right." They travelled for many, many miles through quiet and strange forests, thick with trees.

8 At last the mouse hopped in front of Lorenze and pointed to the shape of a great castle tower rising through the mist of the forest. "There it is, my friend," it said. Lorenze felt his heart jump for joy. "I have found the castle," he said. "But how do I get the golden box to speed it back?"

THE GOLDEN BOX

1 Thanks to a tiny sharp-eyed mouse from the kingdom of Mice Lorenzo had at last found the castle he had been seeking. It had been earned away by magic by the three little wizards in the golden box stolen by a greedy servant. Boldly Lorenzo rode towards the castle gateway but was halted by two guards. He once passed, by command of the owner, our master. They said.

2 So Lorenzo had to obey and move away wondering what next he should do. His problem was solved when the mouse slipped from the horse's back and, almost invisibly moved towards the guards. "Do not worry," it said in a tiny squeaky voice. "I am small enough to slip past them without being seen and if the golden box is within the castle I will find it for you."

3 Having wriggled his way past the sentries, the brave little mouse entered the castle to search for the golden box. But almost at once it came upon its most hated enemy—a cat. For a moment the mouse hesitated in fear, but then saw that the cat was quietly sleeping, so screwed up its courage and crept by.

4 Fear of cats not to be seen, the brave little mouse moved silently through the castle and in an upstairs room came upon the golden box. Now came the problem of getting it out, but by pushing it with all its might, the mouse managed to get it to the outside of the castle.

5. Lorenzo was overjoyed to see the golden box again. "Now I have the power to put things as they were," he said. He opened the box and out stepped the three little magic men. "At your service good sir," they said. "What is your command?" Take the castle back to the place where it once stood," answered Lorenzo. "My future happiness depends on it, so please do not let me down, I beg of you."

6. In a flash it was done. The magic men snapped their fingers and the great castle rose from the ground and soared away into the sky. The greedy sorcerer watched it go, shaking his head in rage. But it served him right, for he had taken the golden box.

7. In a rush of wind which sounded like a tornado, the splendid castle came swooping down and landed on its gleaming gold pillars in the exact spot from which it had been taken. And you can well imagine the joy of Fiorina. Lorenzo's wife when she saw it. "My dear husband has brought it back, so all is well," she gushed.

8. So Lorenzo and Fiorina were together again and the Duke or Lorenzo was happy to get his castle back. It was all because of the little mouse and they all moved their thanks to it as it returned to the Kingdom of Elfin. And even the magic men from the golden box were glad to be with Lorenzo again.

Jesús Blaseo

The ENCHANTED LION

Once Upon a Time

The Enchanted Lion

24 April 1971 #115 - 15 May 1971 #118

The Water of Life

04 September 1971 #134

The Brave Young Shepherd

25 September 1971 #137

The Water-of-Life

1. Long ago, three brothers and a sister lived in a palace with a beautiful garden. Many people came to see the garden, and among them was a kindly old man. He said, "It is very beautiful, but you still need three things—a pitcher of the water of life, a branch of the tree of beauty, and a talking bird." And he presented Emma, the sister, with a knife that shone eerily in the evening sunlight.

2. "If ever that becomes dull, it means that danger threatens," he explained. "The things you need are in a beautiful garden on the mountainside." He bade them farewell, and shortly afterwards the eldest brother set forth. He was still some way from the mountain, when he met a giant, who asked him where he was going. He explained, and the giant warned him.

3. He said, "Many people have come this way, seeking what you seek, but they have not returned. When you reach the mountain, you will see many stones. As you walk past them, they will set up a clamour, but you must not look round at these. Walk straight on, and when you reach the garden, take what you want." The eldest brother thanked him, and went on his way, and after some time, arrived at the mountain. There he saw the stones, and they had faces like people.

4. As he went up the mountain, he passed quite close to the stones. The clamour they made was very great, and he forgot the giant's warning. He was curious, and looked round—and immediately turned into a stone himself. When he did not return home, his two brothers and Emma wondered what had happened. They looked at the knife, and found it had turned very dull. It was a warning. Great danger was threatening them!

5. While Emma was still looking at the knife the second brother decided that he must go and search for the three things they needed for their garden. But he did not return, either, and so the third brother set out. He also failed to come back, and so Emma decided that she herself should go to look for the water of life, the tree of beauty and the talking bird.

6. She set forth in fear and trembling and met the giant, who warned her about the stones on the mountainside. As she went past the stones, she even heard her brothers' voices coming from them, but she did not turn round and look at them. At last she reached the beautiful garden, took her pitcher, and filled it from the fountain of the water of life. She had succeeded where her brothers had failed!

7. Emma then broke off a branch of the tree of beauty, and put the talking bird into a cage she had brought with her. On the way back, she spilled some of the water on to the stones, and to her delight they turned back into her brothers. Others turned back into the many boys and girls, who had tried to reach the garden and failed.

8. All the boys and girls danced and sang with joy, and then thanked Emma for what she had done for them. The three brothers were tremendously proud of their sister. Then they led a gay procession down the mountainside, and waved to the giant as they passed him. He waved back, delighted to see them all alive again. All the parents were delighted to see their children again, and there was great rejoicing. And Emma and her brothers' garden became even more popular with its water of life, its branch from the tree of beauty, and its talking bird.

The Brave Young Shepherd

1. Once upon a time, King Argus of Nuralia decided to make a new law. It was that whenever he sneezed, all his subjects had to say "To your good health, Your Majesty." "Go and tell my people of this new rule," he said to his Prime Minister. And so the poor man, who knew better than to argue with the King once his mind was made up, went to spread the news.

2. Everyone obeyed the new law, except for a young shepherd boy called Alan. Because he refused to say "To your good health, Your Majesty," he was taken before the King who commanded him to say it. But the shepherd boy said, "I will not say those words until you give me your daughter's hand in marriage." "Throw him into the bear pit," roared the King, very angry at Alan's words.

3. But imagine the King's surprise when he went to the bear pit the next morning and found Alan sitting on an overturned bucket, talking to the bear. The beast was not at all its usual fierce self, but sat listening with a mild interested expression on its face. "Now, you will say the words," shouted the King. But Alan answered calmly, "Not unless you give me the hand of your daughter in marriage."

4. At his words, the King was even more annoyed than before. "To the wolves with him!" he roared. And so Alan was put in a pen with a pack of hungry wolves. But before they could attack him, he took from his pocket a tin whistle and started to play it. The sound was so sweet that the wolves got up on their hind legs and began to dance. They were so occupied with the dance that they did not attack Alan. "Throw him over a high cliff," shouted the angry King.

4. So poor Alan was taken by a group of soldiers to the edge of a very high cliff. Looking down, he knew that if he was pushed he would be killed. Luckily he was a quick-thinking lad and he knew that the only way of saving himself lay in trying to distract the soldiers' attention. "Look," he cried, pointing beyond them, "there is a lion devouring its prey." Startled, the guards looked away, and while they did so, the shepherd boy tore off his outer clothing.

5. Quick as a flash, he threw his clothes over the edge of the cliff and then hid behind a nearby bush. When the soldiers saw his clothes lying on the rocks they thought that the shepherd boy had jumped. "We must go and tell the King," they cried. "He will be pleased with us."

7. But Alan was ahead of them. Quickly recovering his clothes, he ran back to the palace as fast as he could and burst into the King's private apartment—just in time to hear the King saying, "I would have given him a palace and great wealth if he had said the words, 'To your good health, Your Majesty.'" "I still won't, until I have the hand of your daughter in marriage," cried Alan. The King and the Princess could hardly believe their eyes.

8. The King was so taken aback that he gave in and told Alan that he could marry his daughter, Melika. "You are a brave man," he smiled, "and I think you will make my daughter happy." At his words, Alan dropped to his knees and then raising his glass, he said, "To your very good health, Your Majesty." Because the young man had at last said the right words, great wealth and a palace were his and he and the Princess lived happily ever after.